BURNING LINER HAS RESERVES ABOARD

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 13.—An endless stream of wireless messages were flashed out along the coast early today, calling assistance to the Fabriliner Sant' Anna, flying a Freedflag, which is on fire with 1,460 Italian reservists gathered from all parts of the United States on board, about 1,100 miles east by southeast of this port.

Though the Sant' Anna had not been heard from for hours, the wireless messages were sent out by officials of the Marine and Fisheries Department, from that rescue ships were standing by and that the fire upon the liner was under control. It was decided by the Canadian government not to send ships from this port because of the distance.

The steamer has aboard 1,939 persons. Of these, 1,764 are passengers, 17 in first cabin, 14 second cabin and 1,703 steerage. The crew numbers 175.

Following the receipt of a radiogram late last night announcing that fire had broken out on the Sant' Anna in latitude 40.3 north and longitude 47.39 west, every spricy was brought into play to quell the burning.

The message stated that the ship was in distress and indicated that her position was serious.

The news at once aroused suspicion that the fire may have been incendiary, because of Italian reservists aboard.

The Sant' Anna sailed from New York for Naples and Sardines on September 8, her departure having been delayed twenty-four hours until

ARBITRATE ON ARABIC?

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—One United States soldier was killed and two others were wounded when an American cavalry patrol was attacked on the border by Mexican raiders early today.

Private Arthur Craft was killed and First Sergeant James A. Wallace and Trumpeter Harold Forney were seriously wounded, dispatches say.

After an hour's fighting the Mexicans retreated into a heavy growth of mesquite. The fight took place near Los Indianos, about fifteen miles west of Brownsville, Tex.

The United States troops engaged were attached to Troop A, Twelfth Cavalry.

John Lowenbrook, the American ranchman who was kidnaped by Mexican bandits and held for ransom and who later escaped, is now under the protection of American soldiers. General Funston wired the War Department today.

Villa's forces at Torreon have become utterly demoralized, State Department advices from El Paso today say. Villa's men have thrown away their arms and fled in disorder. They have given up town after town without the semblance of a fight.

Frightful conditions are reported at Durango, where the branch of the Bank of Chihuahua has closed. The streets are filled with rioting, starving people.

A new Mexican policy, involving possibly ultimate recognition of Carranza, will be considered when the South American envoys meet with Secretary Lansing, probably tomorrow, to consider the replies to the invitation to the factional leaders to participate in a general peace conference.

Military conditions have changed to such an extent that some of the diplomats who have been unalterably opposed to Carranza now believe that he dominates the situation.

CAVALRY AT BORDER FIRED ON

ENVOY AND LANSING CONFER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—A report was circulated immediately following Ambassador von Bernstorff's conference with Secretary Lansing that the United States had agreed to arbitration of the question of the liability arising out of the Arabic case. No confirmation of this report could be obtained.

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Germany is going to insist that the question of whether the Arabic, sunk by a German submarine, was a hostile vessel, be submitted to arbitration.

This became known here today on the highest authority. Count von Bernstorff, it was understood, was to make such representations to Secretary of State Lansing when he saw him today.

Count von Bernstorff arrived at the State Department at noon. He smiled as a battery of movie operators lined up to snap him. He appeared very cheerful and optimistic. In answer to questions he said that he had not received any further word from Berlin and added that he did not see why he should at this time.

Germany is clinging to the idea that every British merchant vessel and liner is under orders at the present time to ram every German submarine that is sighted. It was learned today that Count von Bernstorff expected that Great Britain, following her announcement that Germany would modify her submarine orders to conform with the visitation and search procedure, would instruct all merchant vessel commanders not to ram submarines and not to attempt to escape when they had American passengers on board. German officialdom confidently believed this would be done.

Now Germany is hoping that the United States will act to have Great Britain do this. When British liners and merchant vessels have American passengers on board they should not endanger the American lives by trying to ram a submarine or to escape one. This is the position that Germany takes.

The German commander who sank the Arabic believed the latter was a hostile vessel, Germany contends, and it is going to hold out for arbitration on that point. It will abide by the result of arbitration proceedings, it is stated.

Captain von Papen, military attache of the German embassy, will be sent home at once if Secretary of State Lansing tells Count von Bernstorff today that he desires it. That became known at the German embassy today. Captain von Papen, it is understood, is desirous of joining the German army in the field. The United States will be asked to furnish him a safe conduct home.

MEXICAN AND GERMAN POLICIES ASSAILED BY LYNN PASTOR

The Rev. William F. Dusseault of Lynn, pastor of the Second Universalist Church, State Chaplain of the Spanish War Veterans and chaplain of the Sixth Regiment, criticised President Wilson's Mexican and German policies in an address to his congregation.

"We took the chief seaport of Mexico," he said, "at a cost of nineteen lives, one hundred wounded and ten millions of dollars. We took it to force a salute to the flag. Has any one heard of that salute being granted?

"Five hundred Americans have been killed by Mexicans, some in our territory. What do we do except talk about it?

"In the Arabic matter, this country has been told by Bernstorff that Germany would yield, but there is no sign of that yielding. I believe Germany is trying to string out the controversy indefinitely. Should she lose, she cannot satisfy our claims; should she win, she will refuse.

WILSON WOULD PUT ARCHIBALD IN PRISON

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—President Wilson has issued orders to the department of justice to prosecute James F. J. Archibald, the American correspondent, who carried the now famous Dr. Dumba letters, to the full extent of the law.

This became known today on the highest authority. The President, it is learned, became aroused over the Archibald situation and is determined to make an example of him. He desires that Archibald be sent to prison of the law provides such a penalty, it is understood. He believes that in this way the using of American citizens and American passports by foreign governments in carrying out their military schemes will be effectually stopped.

U. S. AGENTS AT WORK TO CLEAR UP 'CONSPIRACY'

Special agents of the Department of Justice today began in Boston an investigation of the reported plot to cause a strike of longshoremen for the purpose of preventing the exports of munitions to the allies.

It was rumored at the Federal Building that if the reported plot was found to be substantiated by evidence, one or more arrests on charges of conspiracy or treason might be made.

It is evidenced by the President's order that James F. J. Archibald be prosecuted for carrying the Dumba letter from this country, that the federal government is determined to stamp out un-neutral activities in this country or by citizens of this country here or abroad.

Special agents of the government are working not only in Boston but throughout New England, especially in fortified cities such as Portland and Newport. Their activities have the dual purpose of checking the work of possible spies and of protecting American neutrality.

NAME FOUR BOSTON MEN.

Four Boston men are involved in the alleged plot to call a strike of longshoremen, according to a story in the New York World today.

The substance of the plot, the World says, was that union leaders were to call the strike and that the unions were to receive $10 a week for each striker. Over a million dollars was turned over by the unions under the alleged plan.

The Boston men mentioned are:

Matthew Cummings, grocer and politician. Cummings, it is charged, was the intermediary between German agents and union leaders. Cummings today absolutely denied the charge.

William F. Dempsey of the International Longshoremen's Union. Dempsay, it is charged, was approached by Cummings and pretended to fall in with the plot in order to discover what was behind it, reporting the facts to Secretary of Labor Wilson.

Dennis D. Driscoll, "active labor leader." The World says he brought Cummings and Dempsey together, but that he tried to dissuade Cummings from his plan.

Francis J. Donahue, former Secretary of State, now chairman of the Industrial Accident Board, mentioned obscurely in one of the letters in the case.

The World says that Cummings had a letter of introduction from Professor Edmund von Mach of Harvard, and that he was in touch with George Sylvester Velreck of the Fatherland.

CUMMINGS' DENIAL.

Cummings' denial was made public in the following formal statement today:

"My attention was called to a very sensational article that appeared in some of the morning papers copied from the New York World, wherein it was stated that one Matthew F. Cummings was implicated in an attempt to bring about last May a longshoreman's strike. My name is not Matthew F. Therefore, I am uncertain whether or not the person mentioned or not. It is said I was introduced to one Dempsey and O'Connor, two officers in the Longshoremen's Union, by a man by the name of Driscoll and that I said I represented German interests that would spend a million dollars to finance a longshoremen's strike.

"I notice the name of Frank J. Donahue of the Industrial Accident Board is also brought into this matter, with a lot of other wild statements.

"Permit me, as far as I am concerned,

HOLLANDER DIES SUDDENLY AT HEARING

Henry Hollander of No. 37 Leverett street, proprietor of the Standard Wine Company at No. 35 Leverett street, was stricken with heart disease today and died in five minutes. He was testifying at the hearing of the Board of Election Commissioners in City Hall, on the charges of illegal registration in Ward 8, brought by Michael J. Flynn, agent of the Anti-Illegal Registration League.

Mr. Hollander had just testified that he had lived for the past nine years at No. 37 Leverett street with his wife and children, and that for a short time last Spring, while his house was undergoing extensive alterations, he and his family took up their residence with his son-in-law, Benjamin Hollander, at No. 823 Beacon street, afterwards going back to his Leverett street home.

He was asked in the examination if he had any grandchildren.

"Yes," he said, "I have two grandchildren," and as he said this his head sank slowly and he lapsed into unconsciousness. A call for a doctor was sent up to the Board of Health on the eleventh floor. Dr. Thomas H. Shea, acting Health Commissioner, and another of the health doctors responded.

French Submarine Sinks a Destroyer

By International News Service.

ROME, Sept. 13.—The French submarine Papin torpedoed and severely damaged an Austrian destroyer in the Adriatic Sea on September 5, the Ministry of Marine announced today. While co-operating with the Italian fleet in the Adriatic, the Papin sighted a group of Austrian destroyers in the Central Adriatic. It immediately launched a torpedo at the group which found a mark in one of the Austrian vessels.

Lowell Ballplayer Marries Secretly

LOWELL, Sept. 13. — Maurice "Shorty" Dee, for two years shortstop and third baseman on the Lowell team, before leaving today for Philadelphia, where he will join the St. Louis American League team, admitted that he married, about a month ago, Miss Mabel Boland of No. 219 Appleton street.

They were married quietly at Concord, N. H., by a justice of the peace and kept the matter secret till today.

BOSTON MEN IN STRIKE PLOT?

Matthew Cummings, One of Men Mentioned, Calls Story "Foolish."

to state that this whole affair is either a pipe dream on the part of some labor leaders, or a half-baked newspaper fake on the part of the New York World.

"I positively deny that I ever held a meeting with Dempsey in the Quincy House or any other place. I never spoke to Dempsey in my life and would not know him if I saw him. I deny that either Dempsey or Driscoll ever introduced me to O'Connor or that I ever spoke to O'Connor in their presence. If the Driscoll referred to is Dennis D. Driscoll, I may say that I have known him for more than twenty years, and in all that time I have never once discussed labor matters with him.

"I have met O'Connor a few times and each time at his request. He introduced himself to me and spoke of a bill introduced last Spring in the New York Legislature which I opposed before the Committee on Cities at Albany at that time. I never asked O'Connor to declare a strike. I doubt very much if O'Connor has sufficient authority to declare a strike. I believe that power rests in the local organizations, and if I desired to bring a strike O'Connor is the last man I would approach.

TO MAKE AFFIDAVIT.

"I am perfectly willing to make an affidavit that I was never asked by any German or by any person representing Germany to bring about a strike, and I also deny that I ever represented German interests anywhere.

"Any communication that I may have sent to O'Connor was in connection with legislative matters and properly signed. I defy him or anybody else to prove otherwise.

"I propose to find out what is back of this whole affair, and when I get all the facts I will consult my lawyer. I realize that the article is written in a very adroit manner in order to evade responsibility, but if it is at all possible I will sue the New York World for libel. This thing looks to me like a clever scheme to intimidate organized labor and particularly the Longshoremen's Union.

"The longshoremen in England struck a half-dozen times this Summer, first for a 20 per cent. war increase, for beer money and other privileges, causing a lot of trouble to the government.

"It is said that contracts for arms and ammunition amounting two two billion dollars are now let in this country. Our longshoremen are handling dangerous explosives for the old rate of wages.

"It is quite possible that this is a scheme financed by the international bankers who are England's agents in this country to forestall a strike this Fall and Winter by organized labor for higher wages which they are justly entitled to. I respectfully suggest to the rank and file of organized labor to keep their eyes wide open and watch a few of their so-called protectors.

"This is the last statement I will make on this matter. My lawyer will handle the rest. I assume that Frank J. Donahue and Dennis D. Driscoll are amply able to take care of themselves."

Dempsey is quoted as confirming the World story in essentials and details. His interview is in part as follows:

"The first inkling I had of this matter was early in May when Dennis Driscoll came to me and told me that Matthew Cummings was anxious to make my acquaintance; that Cummings was desirous of bringing about a strike among the longshoremen that would absolutely stop the shipment of arms and munitions to the allies; that he (Cummings) had told Driscoll that he was 'acting for interests that would put up millions.'

"'Driscoll has always been a good friend of mine—a good friend of all labor leaders who are on the level—and he tried to dissuade Cummings at the very start. He told him among other things that our organization had an agreement with the shippers throughout the Atlantic Coast district, New York city excepted, that would make it impossible to put through such a scheme.

"Well, Driscoll and I talked the matter over. I didn't want to be a party in any way to Cummings' foolish undertaking. But feeling that perhaps Cummings or some one else might have got to others in the organization, I determined to get a line on what was going on and to report immediately what I did to President O'Connor.

CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

"Finally I met Cummings at the United States Hotel in Boston.

"Before we got to the hotel, Driscoll and I agreed that it would be best for me to see Cummings and learn to just what extent these matters had been carried. Driscoll cautioned me to be on my guard and I was.

"When we entered the hotel lobby, Cummings was there. Cummings and I were introduced by Driscoll. We shook hands and that was about all. Cummings looked me over from head to foot, then immediately called Driscoll to one side. Driscoll told me afterward that Cummings then asked him if I was 'an all right sort of a fellow.'

"Driscoll informed Cummings straight from the shoulder that he was making a grave mistake—that he (Driscoll) had known me for years, and that he would stake his life that I wouldn't even think of touching such a dirty proposition.

"Cummings left the hotel without saying a word to me about his plans.

"I telegraphed to President O'Connor, informing him that this conspiracy was being hatched.

"After talking it over we agreed to string Cummings along, to see if any one in our organization was disloyal and had been got to and to see who the big men with millions behind Cummings were.

"O'Connor and I returned to Boston. Cummings fairly fumed at the opportunity to meet O'Connor. He made statements to O'Connor that absolutely staggered O'Connor. Cummings made no bones of admitting that, through his scheme to tie up all shipping along the Atlantic coast, the allies would be crippled and the success of Germany made certain within a short period.

"Cummings told O'Connor that money was no object, that the expenditures of a million more or less wouldn't matter in the way of accomplishing the purpose to cripple the allies; that the people behind him had the money—literally millions—and that they would spend it freely.

"Where were you millions to come from, so far as you know?" Dempsey was asked.

"Where?" answered Dempsey. "Why, from Germany—the agents of Germany in this country, of course. Germany was to finance the strike."

"Who was the big man?"

"We understood the 'big man' to be Dernburg. I don't believe there is any reason to think it was any one else.

"I have the best reason for believing that before Cummings took active charge of the strike proposal it had been entrusted to a man who is now holding high public office in Massachusetts. This man's efforts were apparently so fruitless that he was shunted out and Cummings put in his place.

"It was calculated by Cummings that if the longshoremen at the Atlantic ports struck for six weeks England and her allies would be so bereft of arms and munitions that the cause of Germany would triumph almost immediately. The allies would have no ammunition to speak of, and Germany would be able to sweep right through them."

"FOOLISH," SAYS CUMMINGS.

Cummings is quoted in the World, in part, as follows:

"Have you, or have you not, acted as the representative of the German government, its officials or of a pro-German propaganda in attempting to bring about a strike of the longshoremen?"

"I have never seen a cent of German money in all my life," answered Cummings. "I know nothing about the longshoremen. I can't understand where the World got all this foolish stuff. This stuff is a pipe dream—a pipe dream, I tell you."

"Did you ask Dennis D. Driscoll to introduce you to William F. Dempsey?"

"I never met Dempsey in my life," snapped Cummings.

"Did you meet Mr. O'Connor, president of the International Longshoremen's Union, at the Marlborough Hotel in New York and didn't—"

"Oh, I might have met O'Connor. I probably did. I've known O'Connor a long time. He's a friend of mine."

"And when you were at the Marlborough, did you telephone to George Sylvester Viereck of the Fatherland?"

"Oh," said Cumming, irritably, "I cannot recall all those things."

"Isn't it a fact that you went to the office of the Fatherland to see Mr. Viereck?"

"Yes, I did go to the Fatherland office," admitted Cummings, after pausing and thinking. "I have known Viereck for a long time. I read his newspaper. I went to his office to tell him to send the paper to several friends of mine who were not receiving it and who are in sympathy with its aims and purposes."

"All this stuff is a lot of rot—senseless rot—and a pipe dream of the worst sort."

"Have you at any time heard that representatives of the German government in this country were willing to put up $10 a week for every longshoreman who would go on a strike and thus prevent the shipment of munitions?"

"How would I know anything about that?"

"Wasn't it proposed to you that the strike might be put through for the payment of a lump sum rather than for payment based upon the scheme to give each striker $10 a week for every week he remaind away from work?"

"Rot! Rot! Rot!" exclaimed Cummings. "I've said the last word I will about this and I don't propose to answer any more questions."

Dennis D. Driscoll, who arranged the first meeting between Cummings and Dempsey, is quoted thus:

"There is nothing I care to say about the matter, and it is forgotten as far as I am concerned.

"The only statement I have to make is this: Certain fellows tried to drag me into that matter, but I wouldn't fall. I know all about what took place, but it doesn't concern me, never did, and, therefore, there is nothing to come from me in the way of comment at this time.

"I'm not denying anything and not admitting anything," was Driscoll's reply. "I simply have nothing to say.

Boston Iberian Survivors Tell of Torpedoing

Charles Hansburg of No. 241 Harrison avenue, Boston, and John Brewell, who came here from Providence to get a place as a hostler on a liner, reached this port on the Devonian, and told today of their experiences when the Iberian, on which they sailed, was torpedoed by a German submarine. Both were wounded and spent six weeks in a Queenstown hospital.

Other hostlers, they said, were killed by the same shot.

Both said German spies are still so thick in London that, despite the utmost vigilance of the British government, that submarine commanders know all about every steamer leaving the Mersey, both as to cargoes and destinations.

"Why, one of the first things the German skipper said to Captain Jago of the Iberian when we went alongside the sea terror in our lifeboat was that he supposed Jago wouldn't tell him where he was bound," declared Brewell.

"I'll tell you myself," said the German, standing on the deck of the submarine. "You're on the way to Boston."

"I was in the boat with Captain Jago, Mr. Burns (also of Providence), the chief engineer, and one other man, who was hurt badly, too," said Brewell, "and I didn't know I was so bad until we all got that boat launched. We were just six hours in the boats before a trawler picked us up."

Above, Judge Willis S. Knowles, who was murdered from ambush at Scituate, R. I. View showing the Knowles homestead and spot where he was shot. Below, Mrs. Cora Wardwell, his housekeeper, who found the Judge shortly after the shooting.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 13.—Because they allege the police are "hiding the facts" and "killing time" in their investigation of the murder of Judge Willis S. Knowles, who was shot to death near his home a week ago, Scituate citizens are planning an indignation meeting to demand police action.

There is general talk that powerful political influences are at work to cover up the crime.

Horace G. Knowles, a wealthy New York real estate dealer and brother of the dead man, was expected to arrive here last Friday to open Judge Knowles' safe for the police. But up to noon today he had failed to arrive, and the police had no word from him.

The police, in the face of the public indignation, say they are about to arrest a man who bore a grievance against the Judge and once threatened his life.

The police declare that they have traced the man's movements on the day the Judge was slain and they have placed him in the vicinity of the scene when the crime was committed.

Lieutenant-Governor Emery J. Sansouci, who is now Acting Governor, declared today: "It is time the State stepped in. When a man of Judge Knowles' standing in the community is murdered in cold blood it is time the murderer is brought to justice."

Since the slaying of the Judge Lieutenant-Governor Sansouci has been a nightly visitor at police headquarters and he has taken considerable interest in the case.

A woman who is in business here and who is known to have kept company with the Judge will be questioned by the police today. It is believed that an understanding existed between this woman and the Judge relative to marriage.

This woman, whose name the police have so far kept secret, is known to have returned valuable presents to the Judge and informed him that she would not accept his gifts until he had rid himself of surroundings that were distasteful to her.

The Providence police department has taken charge of the murder, which has baffled the police departments of Cranston and Johnston for over a week. Several of the best known officials in the Providence police department have been assigned to the case.

BIG MEETING TO ROUSE POLICE IN KNOWLES CASE

2 AIR RAIDS ON ENGLAND IN 24 HOURS

By International News Service.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Zeppelin airships made another raid on England last night. The German aerial squadron dropped bombs on the East coast, but an official statement issued by the Press Bureau shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon stated that no casualties resulted.

This is the second raid in twenty-four hours, another having been made on Saturday night. It is reported that Count Zeppelin in person directed the Saturday night raid.

Increased recruiting due to the recent Zeppelin raids on England has added more than 50,000 soldiers to the British army. It is probable that within a week as many more will be enrolled.

It is expected that the government will be called upon in Parliament to give more information as to what has actually occurred in the various raids.

PEOPLE WANT FACTS.

Some members of Parliament believe that certain facts can be given without betraying any military secrets.

The British censor passed a Berlin dispatch stating that the London docks and their environs were bombarded Saturday night without either affirmation or denial.

Never until this week have the people of England heard a gun fired for the defence of their capital against a foreign enemy, and as a result the excitement among the population is intense. For two and a half centuries the navy has stopped the ears of London against the warbark of an attack.

This greatest of all wars, however, has brought the fighting to the very hearthstone of Buckingham Palace. The press during the week has warned the public against the seriousness of the situation and the dangers, not alone by the enemy, but from stray shots by anti-air craft guns fired for the city's defence.

The appointment of a new director of the naval air department indicates that the government is prepared to meet this new form of attack that menaces the city.

ZEPPELINS ESCAPE.

All day and night air men are patrolling the skies above London and environs, but the Zeppelins managed to get by under cover of the darkness and the fogs.

The archdeacon of London referred to the Zeppelin raids in his sermon in St. Paul's today. He said:

"I need not go further back than last Wednesday to tell you that battle has changed into murder. Speaking with all the restraint that is due from every preacher as well as from the press, and with the knowledge and consent of the censor, I tell you that in one hospital alone were taken the dead bodies of little children of fifteen, ten, seven and five years and of one little baby, so that a nursery became a slaughter house.

"Of the imperial murderer who allowed it, if he did not order it, all we can say is, in the words of the Psalmist—the most awful punishment given to man—'I will set before thee the things that thou hast done.'"

Typhus Cases Are Found in Berlin

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Berlin Vorwaerts reports that owing to some cases of typhus fever having been discovered in the western district of Berlin, the police have cautioned the public against the use of unboiled milk.

Asleep, Is Swept Off Deck to Death in Sea

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 13.—Rolled off a motor boat by the wash of a passing steamer, Oscar Nelson, a boiler-maker of this city, was drowned off Providence Island.

ALARM BY BABY, INTRUDER IS CAPTURED

A desperate struggle in the dark early today between John M. McDougall, twenty-one, said to live on Bernard street, Dorchester, and Charles Alpert of No. 28 Devon street, Roxbury, in one of the chambers of Alpert's home, resulted in the arrest of McDougall by Patrolman Edward C. Maguire of the Dudley street station on the charge of breaking and entering in the night time, with intent to rob.

According to the police version of the attempted robbery, McDougall climbed to the second floor of Alpert's house, lifted a screen and started to get in the window. He put his foot inside and struck the crib of Alpert's three-year-old son. The baby cried and awakened Alpert, who gave battle to the intruder.

Finally after a desperate struggle Alpert succeeded in downing McDougall and Officer Maguire, who was passing, took him in charge.

While standing at the patrol box the police say that McDougall again gave battle, this time to the officer, and after a struggle the policeman put the prisoner in the wagon and put him in the patrol wagon.

Matin Offers New Monroe Doctrine

By International News Service.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The Paris Matin today quotes the Monroe Doctrine and explanates that it calls a "hue but militating acts of interference with American internal affairs committed by Germany and Austria since the beginning of the war." It then continues, "Put side by side these facts and the famous declaration of James Monroe and you will see the doctrine that really ought to be formulated is as follows: 'It is forbidden to European governments to interfere in the internal politics in any State on the American continent except the one which promulgated the doctrine.'"

POLICE SEARCH FOR WOMAN IN THE NEWPORT "SPY" CASE

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 13.—Twenty armed marines are today patrolling Rose Island, one of the most important naval bases in Narragansett Bay, as a result of the arrest on Friday of Nicholas K. Card, a Newport fisherman, for trespass and revelations concerning a German spy system in New England, of which a German baroness, with a temporary home near Roseau, is said to be the inspiration and brains.

Developments within the past forty-eight hours satisfy the United States secret service agents that they have unearthed the biggest spy plot since the European war began.

They are now searching for a fashionably dressed young woman of "foreign birth," who was Card's passenger on August 24, when he is alleged to have invaded an island on which is stored the largest quantity of high explosives, torpedo warheads and gun cotton at any of the New England coast defences.

WASHINGTON GETS FACTS.

The most striking fact brought out today in connection with the spy intrigue was the admission by Assistant United States District Attorney Peter C. Cannon that "it seemed like fiction." He states that he and other officials are satisfied that Card had another woman than the one he claimed in his eighteen-foot auxiliary catboat the morning he was discovered close to one of the buildings housing the highest explosives on the reservation.

He also says that depositions have been forwarded to Washington. All of which shows that the spy system isn't the mythical institution many supposed.

With an abundance of evidence to confirm what began as suspicions, much of it in the nature of intercepted letters and telegrams, the secret service men of this country and Canada are today hot on the trail of the leaders of the plot the tentacles of which reach over the Atlantic seaboard.

They claim to have identified certain male spies, but they are most anxious just now to establish the identity of the mysterious woman, who, with a mantilla over her head and diamonds flashing on her fingers, went out before breakfast with Card, a rough fisherman, in his filthy boat for a cruise among the islands in Narragansett Bay.

HUNT FOR WOMAN.

Rose Island, where Card landed, is a mile off Newport and close to the United States torpedo station. Card has been arrested for trespassing on a government reservation, arraigned before United States Commissioner Healy and held in $2,000 for a hearing on Friday. The penalty is a fine of $500 or six months imprisonment or both. The secret service agents are anxious to have the woman of mystery a prisoner the day Card is heard.

Card told the Federal officials that the woman was the wife of a petty officer on a battleship and often sailed with him for pleasure, with her husband's consent.

Developments today dispute him and show that his early morning passenger was a young woman of culture and special distinction. One of the most romantic phases of Rhode Island's spy expose is the number of fashionable women known to be involved.

The Department of Justice agents are behind every energy to determine whether Card's passenger was the German baroness, who is known to have been conspicuous at many executive sessions here and at Newport and Bost n, or whether she was a woman operative of the baroness. Many men and women socially prominent are likely to be implicated before the inquiry ends.

Salem Cadets in Camp at Boxford

BOXFORD, Sept. 13.—The Second Corps Cadets, under command of Colonel C. F. Ropes, are today in camp on Boxford Field as light artillerymen. The cadets have formerly been infantry. They now constitute a battery of the State artillery force for the first time in the history of the organization.

The men will spend six days in different manoeuvres. The corps came over the road from Salem and upon reaching the camp grounds at once erected tents.

The corps is equipped with the guns of Battery C of Lawrence, fifteen regular army horses and eighteen other horses. Thorndike D. Howe of Lawrence has been appointed camp instructor.

Dr. Campbell to Quit Cambridge Church

The Rev. J. L. Campbell, for eleven years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Cambridge, has tendered his resignation to accept a call to the First Baptist Church at Vancouver, B. C. The resignation is to take effect the last Sunday in this month.

Dr. Campbell was a member of the committee of one hundred that went to Philadelphia to urge the Rev. Billy Sunday to come to Boston next year. He was active in the campaign to put a stop to the illegal selling of liquor in Cambridge last Spring. He was a lecturer at the Gordon Bible Institute of Boston.

Muddy Baths for South Shore Folk

Bostonians who are accustomed to stay late in the season at Hull, Nantasket and Hingham were surprised today when they attempted to take their morning bath to find the water in the tubs muddy. The Hingham Water Company is at work now drawing off the water mains.

Hull and Nantasket felt the trouble the worst. It was all due to the fact that one of the pumps at the pumping station was disabled last night and the big pump rolled up the water while workmen were relaying mains at the pumping station.

Pastor Retires After 34 Years

The Rev. Samuel Knowles preached his farewell sermon from the pulpit of the First Baptist Church, Lexington, where he has been pastor for eight years. When his resignation goes into effect Wednesday, Mr. Knowles will have completed thirty-four years in the Baptist ministry.

Former Governor Harris of Ohio Dead

FOUR AMERICAN CHILDREN BORN IN WAR'S SHADOW

Four children of John I. McKean, all born in Rumania while the events were fomenting that led to the great war. They are now paying their first visit to America. Their father, an American, is manager of the Rumanian branch of the Standard Oil. Left to right, they are Everett, John, Jeanette and Kenneth.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—After twice narrowly escaping disaster the steamer Ryndam, of the Holland-American line, reached port here with a big list of passengers.

First the steamship almost collided with a floating mine off Dover, England, on August 29, a day after she left Holland. Next, in a heavy fog off Nantucket, she just escaped hitting a warship, believed to be a British cruiser on patrol.

Those of the passengers who saw the big mine floating toward the Ryndam at Dover were in panic until two mine sweepers picked up the contrivance and exploded it.

To add to the excitement of the passage, the passengers were compelled to listen for several hours while off the Belgian coast, to a fierce attack by British warships upon the German fortifications in the vicinity of Ostend. The heavy cannonading shook the ship.

Among the passengers was John I. McKean, an American, manager of the Roumanian branch of the Standard Oil Company. He brought over for their first visit to America his four children, all born in Roumania.

"Roumania is for the allies," he said. "She is fully prepared for war. On our way to Holland we visited Berlin. There we inadvertently dropped into English conversation. Insults were directed at us from all sides and it became so unpleasant we had to leave. The animosity toward Americans in Berlin is almost as pronounced as that entertained for Englishmen."

Because of his intense hatred for the German invaders, George, the seven-year-old son of the Baroness de Crombrugh of Ghent, Belgium, was brought to this country by his mother.

He persisted in sticking his tongue out whenever he met a German," explained the Baroness. The Baroness will go to Florida, where her husband has purchased an orange grove.

Most of the cargo of the Ryndam was the product of German and Austria which for months had been held up at Rotterdam because of the British blockade. Most of the stuff is material used in the manufacture of dyestuffs.

MISS BURGER, RECOVERING, STILL IN IGNORANCE OF MOHR'S DEATH

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 13.—Miss Emily G. Burger, former secretary to Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, and who was shot and seriously wounded while riding in the doctor's automobile the night the latter was slain, was today able to sit but on the hospital piazza in a wheel chair.

Her complete recovery is now expected within the next week or ten days. Tomorrow physicians will probe for the two bullets which are still in her body.

Miss Burger has not been informed of the doctor's death, however, and the hospital attendants have been given strict orders not to discuss the tragedy with her in any way.

The police were busy today drawing together their net of evidence for the hearing in the Warren District Court Thursday. Hope that Miss Burger could attend this hearing has been abandoned.

HEARING THURSDAY.

With this hearing fast approaching Mrs. Mohr, the doctor's widow, bears up under the ordeal of accusation with the same remarkable courage which has characterized her since the fatal night. With the three negroes—Brown, Spellman and Healy—she will face the court charged with plotting her husband's death.

There is today a possibility that her two own children may be used against her as witnesses for the State.

That Charles Franklin Mohr, Jr., nine, will be a witness for the prosecution is assured, but the tender age of Virginia, who has just passed her seventh birthday, may save her from the ordeal on the plea that she is not qualified to testify in so important a case.

There is talk of putting little Virginia on the witness stand to determine whether she appreciates the difference between right and wrong and if her answers indicate that she has reached that stage of mental development she will be introduced as a full fledged witness.

Efforts are being made to eliminate both the Mohr children from the trial and to spare them from publicity. The greatest obstacle to this, so far as Charlie is concerned, is the fact that Miss Florence Ormsby, secretary to the murdered doctor, and others will say that Mrs. Mohr insisted that he take part in the interviews where Dr. Mohr and Miss Burger were assailed. But the State's chief motive in introducing the children if developments do not interfere is to learn from their own lips what extent they spied on their daddy.

SAY CHILDREN LISTENED.

Mrs. Mohr is alleged by her husband's sympathizers to have instructed the children and the servants to keep their eyes and ears open for whatever the doctor and Miss Burger did or said.

Dr. Mohr told Miss Ormsby shortly before his death that he had caught Charlie and Virginia listening and peeping through keyholes, and added that he would cut them and their mother off without anything. But that the father's love had not been entirely shattered by these alleged activities on the part of his two children by his second marriage, was shown by his alertness in noticing the condition of sneer shoes and clothing.

Dr. Mohr had a son and daughter by each of his two wives. This double set of children promises to develop a bitter contest over his estate, roughly appraised at from $500,000 to $750,000.

Abandoned Baby Found in Bushes in Brookline

Clad in slippers and pajamas, wealthy residents of the Fisher Hill section of Brookline early today joined in a search for an infant whose cries had aroused the entire neighborhood from sleep.

The baby, its little body shielded from the chill morning air only by a newspaper, was finally located in some bushes on a Clinton road lawn.

The infant, which was but a few hours old, was sent to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

By International News Service.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Another graft scandal arising from the war came to light here today following the arrest of Charles Damaye, director of the Abeille Towing . mpany, and one of the biggest ship-owners in France. DIVORCE WILL BE ASKED BY JUDGE BATCHELDER

FITCHBURG, Sept. 13.—Judge Clark A. Batchelder, whose wife recently filed a $15,000 alienation suit against his former stenographer, Miss Bernice M. D. Hartley, today announced that he would file suit for a divorce in the Superior Court at Worcester. He said this suit would accuse his wife, Mrs. Harriet T. Batchelder, of cruel and abusive treatment.

The judge's counsel are Walsh & Walsh of this city, and his announcement is the climax of the Batchelder marital troubles which first became public through the wife's suit against Miss Hartley a month ago. Miss Hartley worked in Boston before she became the judge's stenographer at Fitchburg.

Mrs. Batchelder charged that Miss Hartley wrongly gained the affections of the judge. She later said that she had letters which would produce at a trial of the case.

After the filing of the alienation suit, word came from Los Angeles, Cal., that Miss Hartley, who had been there on a visit, had cut short her stay and was hurrying East.

Mrs. Batchelder is a good deal younger than the judge. They were married in 1913 at Leominster. The judge has several children by a previous marriage.

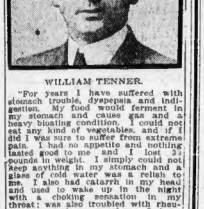
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

CLAIMS DOCTORED FOR THREE YEARS

Prominent Boston Man Never Was Helped Until He Took Plant Juice.

One of the most interesting of the recent statements made regarding Plant Juice is that of Mr. William Tenner, of Roxbury, the popular manager of the large lunch company, who writes:



WILLIAM TENNER.

"For years I have suffered with stomach trouble, dyspepsia and indigestion. My food would ferment in my stomach and cause gas and a heavy bloating condition. I could not eat any kind of vegetables, and if I did I was sure to suffer from extreme pain. I had no appetite and nothing tasted good to me and I lost 31 pounds in weight. I simply could not keep anything in my stomach and a glass of cold water was a relish to me. I also had catarrh in my head and used to wake up in the night with a choking sensation in my throat; was also troubled with rheumatism in damp weather. I have doctored for three years but received no benefit whatever, until I was told to try Plant Juice. I have taken several bottles and am now cured of all my troubles. I can eat well, sleep well, the catarrh in my head is gone and I am a well man once more. I want to say for the benefit of the public that this statement is freely given, with the hope of benefiting others."

Such words as these and those of many others which have been printed, have a wide influence, for they come from men of standing and integrity, who have given Plant Juice a fair trial and have been benefited thereby.

Plant Juice acts like magic in stomach trouble, gas formentation, dizziness, bloating and heavy, distressed feeling after meals and on retiring. It attacks and destroys all poisons in the blood, corrects diseased conditions of the liver and kidneys and restores them to normal condition.

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Co.'s Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

Filene's

One Individuality of

Our Anniversary---All Week

That Should Be Appreciated by Busy Women, Is a

Different Kind of Fashion Show

using living models, but otherwise bearing little resemblance to the usual.

Other Individualities of Our Anniversary

Old Time Fashions—a display of picturesque clothes of the last 200 years, interesting as an illustration of the evolution of style. (Shop Windows—on the Upper Floors)

Other exhibits—of unusual and antique merchandise throughout the store.

Model Play Room—and wardrobe for girls. (Girls' Shops, Fourth Floor)

A Doll Show and Contest—also a model Play Room and a Doll House. (Babies' Shops, Third Floor)

Special Music—on the Chorsicelo. (Restaurant and Street Floor)

Sightseeing Tours—throughout the store from the wireless station on the roof to the boiler room in the sub-basement. (Leave Personal Service Bureau, street floor balcony, hourly from 9 to 4.)

IT has been our experience that the usual Fashion Show exhibits mainly garments that appeal to those who wish to be extreme in their dress and conspicuous thereby. Such shows are interesting as spectacles, but otherwise of no particular service.

The sole object of this new kind of living model show is to enable our customers to inform themselves quickly and satisfactorily on the new wearable styles of the season as designed by the foremost makers and adapted and selected by our own experts for New England women and misses.

THE garments shown are selections from our new Autumn stock. These garments are such in style and cost as to be of direct interest to nine out of ten women in the audience.

We show styles for elderly women and large women as well as for young women and slender women. Complete outfits (suit and hat, dress and coat, and complete wardrobes) will be shown at various moderate prices, as well as single suits and dresses at the prices most people want to pay. Clothes for all occasions are included.

The models will appear today at 2:30 and following days at 10:30 and 2:30, on a small stage erected on the sixth floor. Prompt attendance is advised, as it will not be possible to seat more than two hundred women.

THIS is a week of celebration throughout the Filene Shops. We shall have no later opening. The stocks are all at their best—supremely ready for Fall—with values that are a brilliant testimonial to Filene specialization. The individualities alone are worth a visit. Welcome!

CZAR AT FRONT; DELAY CHANGE IN CABINET

By International News Service.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 13.—Emperor Nicholas has gone to the front and the reorganization of the Cabinet will await his return, but it is expected that within a week the new ministerial slate will have been completed. Until this has been ratified, the Ministers of the Goremykin Cabinet will perform the usual duties.

M. Goremykin is expected to return from the Czar's headquarters tomorrow with a program for immediate action which has received the Imperial sanction. The Duma leaders will be impressed with the necessity of speeding their program.

Suggestions of the Goremykin politics assert that the Premier has won another victory over the Duma, but it is apparent that the termination of the political conflict now being waged is not yet in sight. The Duma's leaders are plainly working for the elimination of Goremykin.

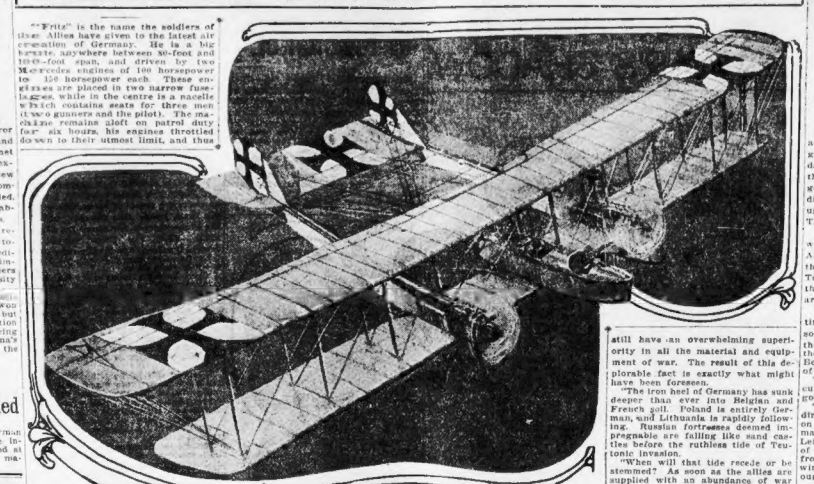
NEW GIANT GERMAN WAR AEROPLANE



"Fritz" is the tame the soldiers of those Allies have given to the latest air creation of Germany. He is a big beauty, anywhere between 80-foot and 100-foot span, and driven by two Mercedes engines of 160 horsepower to 250 horsepower each. These engines are placed in two narrow fuselages, while in the centre is a nacelle which contains seats for three men (two gunners and the pilot). The machine remains aloft on patrol duty for six hours, his engines throttled down to their utmost limit, and thus still have an overwhelming superiority in all the material and equipment of war. The result of this deplorable fact is exactly what might have been foreseen.

"The iron heel of Germany has sunk deeper than ever into Belgian and French soil. Poland is entirely German, and Lithuania is rapidly following. Russian fortresses deemed impregnable are falling like sand castles before the ruthless tide of Teutonic invasion.

"When will that tide recede or be stemmed? As soon as the allies are supplied with an abundance of war materials.

"I am recalling unpleasant facts to stir my countrymen to put forth their strength to amend the situation. There has been a great awakening and prodigious efforts are being made to equip the armies. Nothing but our best can pull us through."

RIFLE FIRE OF FRENCH HALTS GERMANS

By International News Service.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Both the French and German armies continue their great artillery duel, according to today's reports from the War Office. On the Lorraine front, German infantry got into action last night, but were dispersed by the rifle fire directed upon them from the French trenches. The text of the communique follows:

"The night saw numerous combats with grenades near the Bethune-Arras highway and one attack by the enemy which was easily repulsed. To the north of the Souchez station there was continued activity by the artillery on both sides.

"The conflict with mines is continuous and very persistent. To the south of the Somme, before Faye, there was a violent bombardment in the sectors of Armancourt and of Berwarques, as well as on the plateau of Quennevieres and Nouvron.

"An intermittent cannonade occurred in Champagne and in the Argonne.

"On the Lorraine front our batteries directed an effective storm of shells on the trenches and works of the Germans in the region of Embermenil, Leintry and Anceviller. Some groups of the enemy's troops who sorted from their trenches and reached our wire entanglements were dispersed by our artillery fire."

Back Bay Police Capture Coon After Long Hunt

A young raccoon, which caused considerable excitement in the Back Bay and was captured by the police after an adventurous chase, is the prize exhibit at the Franklin Park Zoo today.

The animal was sighted at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Boylston street by Patrolman Hayes and Sergeant Campbell of the Back Bay station. It was followed to Commonwealth avenue, where it vanished in a clump of bushes.

In a few minutes the eyes of the animal were seen shining from the porch of a house. Stones soon brought the animal from its perch. It was finally cornered and a noose slipped over its head.

The animal was placed in a cell at the Back Bay station. A short time later, when an officer went to look at the animal, the cell was empty.

"FRAMERS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A." NO. 7

Thomas Jefferson "Father of the Declaration of Independence"

THIS noble founder of the Democratic Party immortalized himself by writing our Declaration of Independence—the document which laid the foundations of Free Government, not only for our own beloved land, but for all the world. His countrymen twice elected him President and will always treasure his memory. Jefferson was the most ardent advocate of Universal Freedom of his time and it was his wisdom and foresight which brought about the Louisiana Purchase. Every drop of his Virginia blood loved Liberty, and because he wanted Americans to be assured of it for all time he championed with all his might and main the signing of the Constitution of the United States. None of the fathers of the Republic were more far-seeing than he and none knew better than he that a mild brew of barley-malt and hops is truly a temperance drink. Hence, in 1816, he wrote President Madison: "A Captain Miller is about to settle in this country and establish a brewery. I wish to see this beverage become common." Jefferson lived past his 83rd year and all his life he was a moderate user of light wines and barley brews. It is unimaginable that were he alive to-day he would vote otherwise than NO to proposed tyrannous prohibition laws. For 58 years Anheuser-Busch have been brewing the kind of honest barley and hop brews which Jefferson hoped in his day to see the National beverage of Americans. Exactly such a beer is BUDWEISER, its quality, purity, mildness and exquisite flavor have won its way to the top. To-day 7500 people are daily required to meet the public demand. Its sales exceed any other beer by millions of bottles.

WORK BEGUN ON SUMMONSES IN FOSS CASE

Work was begun today on the summonses charging former Governor Eugene N. Foss with libel, which are to be issued as a result of the complaint of Dennis D. Driscoll, whom Foss charged with improper attempts to influence one of his appointments when he was Governor.

The summonses, when ready, are expected to be signed by Judge Burke, and will then be given to Inspector Waite for service.

Joyce, who is secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, and who Foss accused of being the prime mover in the effort to force him to appoint Driscoll to the Prison Commission, today denied every charge, declaring that the Foss statements are "direct falsehoods."

Bernhardt Denies U. S. Tour Cancelled

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Sarah Bernhardt has postponed for two months her forthcoming tour of the United States. Asked regarding a report that she had cancelled her American engagements, Mme. Bernhardt telegraphed:

"I am not abandoning my tour in America. I have asked for two months' time in order to form a new company as all the actors who were with me on my previous tour are serving in the army, four having been killed. Vive la France!"

LLOYD-GEORGE WARNS BRITAIN OF PERIL

LONDON, Sept. 12.—That the central powers still have an overwhelming superiority in all the material and equipment of war that the allies to win must put forth all their strength is the statement made by David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, in the preface of a book containing his speeches since the outbreak of the war, entitled, "Through Terror to Triumph." He says:

"After twelve months of war my conviction is stronger than ever that this country could not have kept out of it without imperilling its security and its honor. We could not have looked on cynically with folded arms while a country we had given our word to protect was being ravaged, trodden on by one of our own co-trustees. If British women and children were being brutally destroyed on the high seas by German submarines this nation would have insisted on calling the infanticide culprit to a stern reckoning.

SYSTEM SHOULD BE DESTROYED.

"Everything that has happened since the declaration of war has clearly demonstrated that a military system so regardless of good faith, honorable obligations and the elementary impulses of humanity constitutes a menace to civilization of the most sinister character, and, despite the terrible cost of suppressing it, the well-being of humanity demands that such a system should be challenged and destroyed.

"The fact that events also have shown that the might of this military clique has exceeded the gloomiest prognostications provides an additional argument for its destruction.

"Nor have the untoward incidents of the war weakened my faith in ultimate victory, always provided that the nations put forth the whole of their strength ERE IT IS TOO LATE. Anything less must lead to defeat. The allied countries have an overwhelming preponderance in the raw material that goes to the making of the equipment of armies, whether in men, money or accessible metal and machinery, BUT THIS MATERIAL HAS TO BE MOBILIZED AND UTILIZED.

TASK REMAINS UNFINISHED.

"It would be idle to pretend that the first twelve months of the war have seen this task accomplished satisfactorily. Had the allies realized in time the full strength of their redoubtable and resourceful foes; nay, what is more, had they realized THEIR OWN strength and resources and taken prompt action to ORGANIZE THEM, today we should have witnessed the triumphant spectacle of their guns pouring out a stream of shot and shell which would have deluged the German trenches with fire and scorched the German legions back across their frontier.

"With the resources of Great Britain, France and Russia, yea, of the whole industrial world at the disposal of the allies, the central powers

BOSTON JEWS ASK LOWELL TO REVOKE HARVARD DECISION

Plans were discussed today by Jews of Boston for a monster mass meeting to protest against the refusal of President Abbott Lawrence Lowell of Harvard to make allowance for those of Jewish faith who must miss entrance examinations Saturday, September 18, the Jewish Day of Atonement.

The refusal to consider the pleas of a committee of prominent Jews to change the date of Saturday examinations or to make some arrangement to relieve the Jewish candidates for admission to Harvard, was given over the telephone by President Lowell. Dean Hurlbut had already announced that no change would be made in the date.

TALKED ON PHONE.

Samuel H. Borofsky, representing the committee, did the talking over the phone with President Lowell, who was at Cotuit, his Summer home. Mr. Borofsky asked that the committee be permitted to see and confer with him. The Harvard president replied that he saw no need of any conference, inasmuch as he had already made his position perfectly clear.

He told the committee, Mr. Borofsky said, that the Jews could have, and should have, taken entrance examinations in June; that Jews who had taken the June examinations and were intending to take further examinations, if de-serving candidates, would have been able to pass at the first examination, and that he considered the matter closed anyway.

SEND LONG TELEGRAM.

News of the snub by the president of Harvard aroused the members of the Jewish faith in Boston to a high pitch of indignation. Balked of the opportunity to talk over the plea in conference, the committee sent the Harvard president the following telegram:

To Abbott Lawrence Lowell,
President of Harvard University,
Cotuit, Mass.

Dear Sir,—Confirming our conversation with you over the telephone today, in which our committee requested and you refused further conversation about making provision for Jewish students in connection with the entrance examination scheduled for September 18, that being the Jewish Day of Atonement, the most sacred day in the Jewish calendar, we beg further to impress upon you the necessity of favorable action, as to do otherwise would, in the opinion of enlightened citizens, strike a blow at the cherished principles of democracy and religious liberty.

Harvard would be utterly faithless to the trust and confidence which is reposed in her as an educational leader, to cure ignorant tolerance and to encourage a wholesome enlightenment in the community. Harvard would be faithless to her own ideals of liberty and truth.

Harvard's indifference to the appeal of the Jewish people through its rabbis and organizations, singles it out unfavorably among the colleges of the State, in view of the immediate and responsive action taken by the Y. M. C. A. Law School, Tufts College, Boston University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard's sister institution.

Harvard, by its refusal, would combat openly the principle of free religious thought. In that it would bring pressure upon the students of a particular faith to abandon their religious beliefs. This contemplated action on your part would stamp Harvard not as it purports to be—non-sectarian—but distinctly sectarian.

This action would commit Harvard to the dangerous stand of being opposed to the influence and development of religion in the life of the community. This action would deprive the J wish students of taking full advantage of the educational opportunities offered by your institution, contrary to the established policy which Harvard has adopted, to spread and popularize its educational opportunities as widely as possible.

We are confident that public opinion would never support Harvard in such a stand, for to oblige a Jewish student to take an examination on the Day of Atonement is equivalent to compelling Christians to take examinations on Christmas Day or Good Friday.

By suggesting to our committee today that desirable Jewish students would have to accommodate themselves to your schedule by taking the examinations in June, we feel that you are imposing a limitation which is unfair discrimination against the students of our faith; for Harvard has never declined to others—because of the consideration of illness, inadequate preparation and other substantial reasons which have guided Harvard's policy — two separate and distinct opportunities for taking the entrance examinations.

We respectfully urge you, therefore, to reconsider the matter an.' to take favorable action and thus maintain the essentials of democracy and the sacred traditions of Harvard.

RUSSIAN DANCER SAYS FAN GIVES GRACE OF BODY

"I found a fan a working companion."

By MLLE. LUBOVSKA.
The Famous Russian Artiste.

Let the light and airy fan take the place of dumbbells.

Most women who really wish to take healthful exercise hesitate when they view the heavy, clumsy weights that are usually offered to them as an adjunct to the routine of becoming strong.

My message to the American woman is that unsoutely no apparatus is required for the development of any part of the body. It is the regular systematic movement of the arms, limbs and trunk, bringing all of the muscles into play, that makes suppleness and strength and takes away adipose tissue.

In my study of dancing as an art and the pursuit of physical strength and grace, which is a religion to me, I found the use of a fan as a working companion was far superior to weights or dumbbells. I carry a fan when "working out." It serves to give me balance and employment—something, as it were, to manipulate as I spin around the room.

"A fan serves to give me balance and employment."

Trainers of soldiers found this fact out long before the dancers did. In the exercises that the army gives to soldiers only the movements of the hands, limbs and body, without any sort of apparatus, are used. I think that the same form of "setting up" exercise is all that one needs to be healthy, graceful and strong.

I use a fan for company, as a sort of plaything to make the exercises seem less like work and to add something aesthetic to the training. I find that my fan—and I never work without one—takes the weight and heaviness from my task.

And besides—

In some balancing exercises where nicety of poise is required the fan has a real, instead of a psychological, value.

CARDINAL HOST OF CATHOLIC DELEGATES

About 100 of the delegates to the national convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, held in Toledo last month, were the guests of Cardinal O'Connell at his residence on Granby street, Back Bay. The event was in the nature of an expression of the cardinal's appreciation of the value of the work performed by the delegates at the convention, in particular, and the work of the Boston Archdiocesan Federation of Catholic Societies, in general.

He congratulated the delegates and briefly outlined the work and aims of the diocesan federation. The effects of its labors have already attained a national scope, the cardinal stated, and he urged the representatives of the organization to maintain the high standing of the federation. He also reminded them that the federation is based on a love of God, and church and country, and the principles that govern these must be always observed.

Henry V. Cunningham, president of the archdiocesan federation, spoke as the representative of the federation. He told of what was done at the convention, and of achievements and projects of the local federation. Other officers of the federation present included Secretary Charles T. Daly of Wakefield, Treasurer Edwin Mulready of Rockland and Vice-President Michael J. Powers of Stoughton.

Among the prominent clergymen present were the Rt. Rev. Mgrs. W. J. Splaine of Roxbury, James J. Chittick of Hyde Park, Ambrose F. Roche of Watertown and A. J. Teeling of Lynn. With the exception of Mgr. Chittick these monsignori are county chaplains of the federation. Other chaplains present included the Rev. J. F. Stanton of Stoughton and the Rev. T. F. Brannon of Brockton.

Luncheon was served under the direction of Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield, Mrs. Martha Moore Avery, Mrs. Henry V. Cunningham and Mrs. Charles T. Daly.

HAD PECULIAR RHEUMATISM— JOINTS CREAKED LIKE DRY HINGE

Waltham Man Says Pain and Stiffness Have Disappeared —Gives Credit to Var-ne-sis

"My joints creaked like a dry hinge, my muscles were stiff and I could hardly walk on account of the stiffness in my knee joints. It was almost impossible to go up or down stairs without great pain," so said J. L. Johnson of 28 Stearns st., Waltham, Mass.

J. L. JOHNSON

"The trouble first started in my hip, so that I was unable to walk, then it shifted to my knees and the muscles of my legs and the small of my back. The pain was terrible and nothing seemed to relieve me. Physicians gave me medicine with but very little effect.

"Var-ne-sis was recommended to me and I decided to try it, with the result that by persisting in the treatment every sign and symptom of the disease left me. The stiffness has entirely disappeared and I haven't a pain or an ache. I have recommended Var-ne-sis to a great many persons, and they have all reported good results."

W. A. Varney says: Var-ne-sis is not a cure all and is not recommended for every ill. Var-ne-sis is a rheumatic remedy that has helped hundreds of rheumatic cripples to recover their health during the past 16 years, and has been particularly successful in rheumatic arthritis or rheumatism of the joints. The remarkable evidence behind Var-ne-sis, and the fact that it is composed of simple vegetable ingredients, make it valuable to every rheumatic sufferer, and none can afford to fail to try it, especially if they have been treated month after month without results. SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

BY RIGHT FIELD

THE crisis of the fight by the Red Sox for the American League championship has the "fans" thoroughly stirred up at last. Their "rooting" in the first game of the series with the White Sox without a shadow of doubt helped bring home the victory for Lannin's boys. The Chicago and Detroit "fans" were out at the ball yard with plenty of noise when the Red Sox were on their invasion. West and Boston folk ought to be able to pull just as hard until our boys are safely out of the woods.

THE Carrigans have the material and the spirit needed to bring a championship to Boston and more of the "rooting" such as we had Saturday will give them a tremendous boost and at the same time handicap our two chief rivals in a thoroughly legitimate way. Walter Jackson has the right idea. Let's all "root" for the Red Sox and turn the White Sox and Tigers back cold in their tracks.

THE great material which President Lannin has furnished "Uncle Hill" Carrigan was well displayed in the first clash with Chicago. Carrigan was able to hurl seventeen men into the fray, every one a player that any team would be proud to have in its lineup. About everybody but Joe Wood, Heinie Wagner and "Babe" Ruth was in there doing his part and these three would have been Johnny on the spot with some AI work if they'd had orders. Rowland may have brought a strong team here, but look at what happened to it.

"PANTS" ROWLAND sent a dozen men into the fray and mighty good men they were, too. Russell, Faber and Scott are the cream of his hurling corps, but they couldn't land the victory. The gameness of the Carrigan wh gives the Red Sox a fine edge for the series and excellent prospects of a K. O. for the White Sox people. Every Red Sox win jams the Rowlands farther back. If the Yankees will keep up their stubborn opposition to the Tigers that will help, too. Donovan may wallop them on the next try. Also, he may not.

HERE is one reason the Red Sox don't care who bought Joe Jackson. This is how the $15,000 Scotch beauty and the once shoeless one from down South stepped up in the first comparison we've had lately:

	ab.	r.	h.	p.o.	a.	e.
Speaker	1	2	2	1	0	0
Jackson	4	1	1	2	1	0

*Two-base hit—Speaker. Three-base hit—Speaker. Double play—Speaker to Cady.

*Footnote: None of this stuff for Jackson.

THE Braves have now won five and lost five on their road trip. They won one and lost two in the Giants series, won two and lost one in Brooklyn, broke even in two games with the Phillies, and have so far won one and lost one with the Cubs, in whose city they now are. They will have to wade right in to make it now. The break in the luck that hit Maranville, Compton, Regan, Fitzpatrick and Schmidt would have put a team less game out of it already.

THE Red Sox played .500 ball during the first week of their home stay. What the "fans" want is .750 pastiming right to the end of the schedule. They're likely to get it, too, the way things look now.

WHILE the "fans" are not losing sight of the White Sox series, they also have their eyes toward the horizon for the clashes with the Tigers that begin Thursday. The visit of the Tigers ought to set a larger attendance record than even the present series with the White Sox. Many people are writing in to make seat reservations for the full Tigers series. It looks as though the ball yard would be jammed right up to a week from tomorrow, and after that there are three bargain bills in succession.

Dooin Strong for Alex.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 12. — Charley Dooin, the Phillies' old manager, here with the Giants, who have lost their last seven of their last eight games, states that Grover Alexander can pitch every third day without being bothered by it in the least, and more than that, can pitch every other day near the season's close. Big Alex recently said, according to Dooin, that if he had a five-days' rest he wasn't much good and could do better work taking the mound every third day.

RED SOX OUT TO CINCH IT TODAY

By RIGHT FIELD.

The wrestling match between the Red Sox and the White Sox goes right on today at Fenway Park., with the first fall won by the Carrigans and the team out to throw the Rowlands twice, the first set-to starting at 1:30 o'clock.

Never before this season were the Red Sox in such good shape to defend their position at the top and hurl back the efforts of the hustling crowd which Manager Rowland has brought East. The first clash went to the best club, playing the best ball, and it looks good for the Red Sox to keep right on and make a cleanup, although everybody admits they will know they have been in some battle.

"Dutch" Leonard, who set the White Sox down one, two, three in two innings while the Red Sox were lining things up for their 5 to 4 win in the opener of the series, will probably take the mound in the first game. Ernie Shore, who is getting mighty stingy with him, is primed to go into the second and baffle the slugging athletes that are the pride of Rowland's heart.

Ray Collins and Vean Gregg are outside choices for work and "Babe" Ruth is nursing his arm along to show against the foe tomorrow.

Jim Scott and Urban Faber will be implored by Rowland to put the White Sox into the running by pitching their heads off in the first game and Eddie Cicotte or "Hitless" Benz is prepared to labor in the second.

Well, what of it? Do you mind the ten hits for a total of sixteen that showed up on the part of the Red Sox in the first battle, and many of them when they were most needed?

That first battle was a regular ball game. It had everybody going, what with the rooting and the mighty struggle on the pasture. Two more regular ball games are on the cards for today.

Ask O'Neill to Resign.

OMAHA, Sept. 12.—President Norris L. O'Neill of the Western League has been asked to resign by a majority of the club owners at a meeting here, T. M. Chivington, president of the American Association, is favored as the new head.

RUNNING EVENTS AT ROCKINGHAM

Thoroughbred runners will divide the honors with the trotters and pacers at the Rockingham Fair which opens September 28 and concludes October 1. Secretary Ralph T. Miller announces there will be two or more races each day and $1,000 in purses hung up.

John Macomber, a well-known amateur rider of thoroughbred horses, has been assigned to take charge of the runners. He states that he is assured entries enough to have good fields in every race.

The card for the present includes a half-mile and one-mile race, opening day, with $100 purses for each event. A purse of $200 will be offered for the one and one-eighth mile race the second day of the fair. Governor's Day there will be a three-quarter and a one-mile race. On getaway day a purse of $200 will be hung up for a one and one-eighth mile event.

Mr. Macomber states that this is a tentative program and in all probability he will offer more races each day, making up the list the night before. All entries should be made with Secretary Millet, Rockingham Park, Salem Depot, N. H., no later than September 25.

Rowland Claims His Club Will Win Series

By C. H. "PANTS" ROWLAND
Manager of Chicago White Sox

We intend to take the series with the Red Sox, even if they did beat us in the first tussle. It was a mighty tough game for us to lose, but we've dropped a lot just like it this year.

On the other hand, it was a mighty fine game for Carrigan and his team to win. If didn't look as though they were in it until they pulled that fine rally. Even then I figured we'd get the odd run.

But that's past now. We'll be out there today and we're still aiming to take the series.

Robbie Is Sure His Club Will Win Out

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13—Manager Wilbert Robinson of the Robins today picked the winner of the National League pennant. Yes, he picks Brooklyn, but says the matter will not be decided until the final series between the Phillies and his team, starting October 4.

"Now, my team, with the exception of Wheat, is in the best of condition and besides the boys know what it means to land up at the top," says Robby.

"Just now nearly all my pitchers are going at top speed, and from the way Pfeffer beat the Braves the other day I can't see where the Western teams are going to knock us out of the running. Pfeffer just now is one of the best pitchers in the National League, and I will depend mostly on his mighty right arm to keep Brooklyn up in the race."

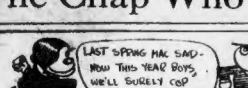
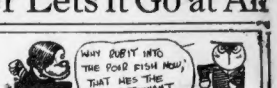
The Chap Who Is Bent on Making Money Go a Long Way Frequently Never Lets It Go at All



BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS



HARVARD ELEVEN STARTS WORK TODAY

The football season at Harvard will be officially opened this afternoon on Soldiers' Field when Captain Eddie Mahan will lead 125, more or less, candidates for this year's eleven out for first preliminary practice.

The bunch will get the word go at 3 o'clock when Coach Percy Haughton will deliver his opening address to the candidates. The work today will not be heavy, but it will not be many days before some scrimmages will be in order, for the first game on the schedule is only eleven days away and Coach Haughton will see that eleven men at least are in perfect trim for that day.

Leo Leary, coach for the ends in the past seasons, announced his retirement, but it is expected that he will be out on the field within a few days.

TWO WESTERNERS COMING.

In order that Harvard may have all there is and the best, Coach Percy Haughton has enlisted the services of two famous Western coaches.

Bob Zuppke, the greatest exponent of "open play," will be one of Harvard's assistant coaches for a few weeks. "The Wizard of Football" as Zuppke is known out West, is best remembered here as the man who developed the wonderful Champaign Park High team, which came East and whipped the Newton High champions in 1912.

Illinois has had Zuppke's services the past two Falls, with the result that it won two successive Conference titles.

The other new assistant coach is Joseph A. Pipal of Oriental College, Los Angeles. He is the man who inserted the English style of soccer into the American game with remarkable success.

Yale and Princeton copied some of Pipal's stunts last Fall and it will be recalled there was a great amount of passing in the Yale-Princeton game. It will not be with a view to experimenting with these passes that Haughton is having the Westerners come on, but with the idea of having the men who know the tactics at work them into Harvard's regular plays.

HAUGHTON MUST BUILD.

Coach Haughton is expected to change his policy to some degree this season. Fewer changes in the lineup will be made and when a change is made it will mean more or less than has been the case in the past.

Of the twenty-four players that participated in the game against Yale last November only eleven are eligible for the team this year and but three of these were in the lineup at the start of the game, so it is apparent that Coach Haughton will have to build practically a new eleven.

The material that will report today is good. Cowan, Gilmore, Wallace, Soucy, Dadmun, Pierce, E. L. Chase, Bigelow and Charlie Colledge are some great huskies and a strong line should be developed of these players.

Captain Mahan, Tom Enright, McKinlock, King, Robinson and Rollins are good backfield men, with Watson, Boles, Murray as the promising quarters.

Tomorrow, and for the remainder of the week, there will be two sessions, one at 10 a. m. and the other at 3. The first week will be devoted to the usual preliminary drill. The scrimmage will not start until next Monday or Tuesday.

Cavanaugh Keeps It Up.

NEWARK, Sept. 13.—Frank Cavanaugh again surprised the "fans" at the Velodrome here tonight, defeating Alfred Goullet in their match, but was caught napping by Cesar Moretti, who took the Brassard away from him. Frank L. Kramo and Iver Lawson, world's tandem champions, won their match from Alfred Grenda and Phil Grill, winning three heats, as they were disqualified for switching in the second.

WILLARD WILL BATTLE ON THANKSGIVING DAY

By JESS WILLARD,
Heavyweight Champion of the World.
Copyright, 1913, by A. Morris. All rights reserved.

I am ready for a big ring engagement on Thanksgiving Day. Yes, this year.

At this moment I am considering a proposition from the management of the Garden. I will not attempt to give a definite answer until I have gone over the matter very carefully.

It is proposed that I tackle Jim Coffey, the Dublin giant. The reason I cannot give my answer now is that Coffey is signed up to meet Frank Moran next month, and I prefer meeting for the outcome of that tussle before giving it my reply. Most assuredly I would not care to fight Coffey if he is beaten by Moran. The latter would then be the logical man for me to take on.

WANTS TO BE POPULAR.

I have no desire to become embroiled with a challenger who has been defeated by another opponent. Taking on the vanquished man would naturally impair the drawing powers of the bunch. I want to be any right here that it is my sole wish to see a full house every time I engage in a fight in defence of my title. It would tickle me beyond measure, for then only will I know that I am a popular champion. And it is no secret that I want to be the most popular champion that ever waved the ring. I will attend to it that those who see me fight always get a run for their money.

Ordinarily the size of the house would make no difference to me, because I shall have my guarantee before signing to meet a man, but it would tickle the cockles of my heart if the people turned out in droves just to see me. I was performing at a time they had the faith in me that I would not disappoint them.

I assure my readers that it will be my one aim not to put up a disappointing fight as the champion. There are too many title-holders at present who are content merely to go through the motions for two rounds or so and draw their money. Such tactics hurt the game immeasurably, and I shall do all in my power to put a stop to this bad impression such methods create.

COFFEY-MORAN MATCHUPS.

When the field of heavyweights is simmered down, it is hard to locate more than two likely opponents for me. I refer to Jim Coffey and Frank Moran. Of course, Luis Angel Firpo is next, but he is so lacking in a good punch that it would be suicidal for him to get into the ring with me. I say this with no show of egotism; I say this merely for the good of Weinert, who is a likable chap.

"Gunboat" Smith, who holds a decision over me, through no fault of mine (as the referee was biased in his verdict), has eliminated himself from the lists by his poor work in the last year. It seems inconceivable that a man could go back so fast. Nevertheless it is a fact that the "Gunner" is no longer a serious contender. I cannot imagine what has happened in his one-time deadly punch.

So once more we get back to Jim Coffey and Frank Moran. Moran's most notable performance was the seven-round knockout of Al Palzer, and his ability to stay twenty rounds with Al has been best proved. Although his arm and leg weary at the end of the twenty rounds, and it is not at all unlikely that Moran would have stopped the target had the bout gone ten rounds more. But that was Moran's misfortune, not his fault. He shall have his chance at me if he gains an undisputed victory over Coffey.

DISSIPATION RUINED PALZER.

Speaking of Al Palzer calls to mind that had this burly fellow confined himself to the straight and narrow path he might now be champion of the world instead of me. Never in my career have I seen a more powerful man than Palzer was three years ago. He was a human Wistfoon.

At that time possessed the greatest physique of any man in the ring and would have amounted to something had he not wasted his strength. Palzer's case is another sermon against treading the primrose path.

It is my intention to fight three battles in the period before I return to giving exhibitions. I want to show the fight-loving populace that I have earned my right to be champion of the world. I will take on the three best heavyweights in the order of their ability.

Should Moran win over Coffey, I would take Moran on first and Coffey next, providing he is only outpointed. Should Coffey be a knockout man, he would have been stricken off the calling list, for the time being, at least.

Again, should Coffey gain the decision over Moran he would be given the preference and Moran would follow as the third man I will leave for the public to select. I do not care to pick my opponents; I will leave that to my clamor at all times, in the matter of my opponents.

BUSY SEASON AHEAD.

This promises to be a busy season for boxing in the vicinity of New York, whether decisions are permitted or not. Nearly all of the headliners in the various divisions are booked for New York, to sign for matches for the indoor campaign. Mike Gibbons will probably be the most active fighter, as he has enjoyed a long rest and is ready for a session of hard work.

It is unlikely that Freddy Welsh will engage in more than one or two bouts in Gotham, unless he promises to put on more interesting exhibitions than he did last Spring.

I look for Willie Ritchie to make a big hit with New York "fans." His battles with Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh were good ones indeed, and if he can repeat them he will be more of a favorite than ever.

Money, Not Blood, Is Fighters' Prize

What a difference there was between the McFarland - Gibbons fight last Saturday night and the fights which took place fifty years ago.

With Gibbons and McFarland, Jess Willard says, it is simply a matter of business. They fought because there was good money in it. But when John Morrisey and Bill Poole fought it was for blood —and bad blood, at that.

Willard is glad the game has changed and he tells interestingly in the AMERICAN Wednesday of some incidents which have helped him in his decision.

BATTLE ON LEVEL 'PACKEY' WON— ED SMITH

By ED. W. SMITH.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Did you ever have a very nice mix-up for one fine and dandy rickey or a fizz, perhaps, when you imagined you needed one badly, and had all of the makings in the glass only to discover that the only bottle of seltzer within a couple of miles had gone dear?

If you haven't been through the horrors of that try to imagine it. Awful, isn't it?

Well, that's the way the "Packey" McFarland-Mike Gibbons boxing exhibition at Brighton Beach Saturday night hit the palates of those who paid their way into "Bill" Marshall's fistic arena expecting to see somebody's spine hit the floor and stay hit for the full count.

Mike Gibbons proved the Zizzles Pizz. He petered out like a bottle of dead seltzer, and instead of furnishing the lemon portion of this impossible fizz by developing into the worst sort of a boxer that a real star ever could.

McFarland outpointed him without trouble and was entitled to the verdict, not alone on the fact that he outclassed Mike with the higher pinnacle than that of the ordinary $50 battler who is willing to take a shoulder out of joint to please a crowd.

The boasted Phantom was A Phfrost.

And not only did "Packey" outscore the supposed shadowy one from St. Paul, but he outmanaged him in that same fashion that one of Chicago's land agents outmanages the Ruhs who is willing to pay a good price to see the Masonic Temple turn on its base.

"PACKEY" OUTGUESSED MIKE.

He outmassed him from the start to finish, and before Mike began to wind up what kind of a ball he was going to throw and then when the pitch came it was right in the groove and "Packey" connected. It was as Cobb waiting for a slow one to drift up to the plate.

Mike was wrong as early as the second round. He was missing then, not by inches, but by feet, and that did not do anything right. All of his efforts either went wild or were so easily anticipated as to be almost ridiculous.

Don't get the impression in your mind that the men went into the ring with any sort of an understanding. There wasn't any. Not a chance, in the world, despite the insels that some of the New York critics made after it was over.

The bout was good and clean, fast as one could expect. It was well considered, and hard enough when the condition of the man is taken into consideration. But dishonest? Never in the world. And here's the reason:

If it had been a frame-up or a "fake" of any kind it would have been a more interesting, perhaps harder, contest. Men in "fake" bouts have a motive. In this case the only motives that suggest themselves at once are a betting angle and the possibility of another match.

There was not enough betting to make that attractive.

To get a fat purse for another meeting the first fight must be interesting, close, exciting and something to make people talk loudly and argue his friends for weeks. Such attention begets more purses and perhaps bigger ones.

Such a fight as they put up Saturday night might get them a return date somewhere, but it would not begin to get them anything like $35,000.

GIBBONS DEAD ON FEET.

Already I have mentioned the poor condition of the men. Here is an explanation. Gibbons did his best, but for he is a middleweight pure and simple and killed his chances completely by attempting to make, and saving his forfeit at 147 pounds. He had motives that suggested themselves at once are a betting angle and the possibility of another match.

Already I have mentioned the poor condition of the men. Here is an explanation. Gibbons did his best, but for he is a middleweight pure and simple and killed his chances completely by attempting to make, and saving his forfeit at 147 pounds. He looked like anything but a champion when he stepped into the ring.

"Packey," a natural lightweight of the oversize type of the day, swelled into the heavyweight division by nearly two years of athletic idleness, was trying to look like a welterweight in good condition when, as a matter of fact, he was a lightweight in slovenly shape.

In short, Mike committed suicide by attempting the impossible in the weight line and "Packey" was almost in the same pickle, because he was not complacent about the job as if opening up a new meal with a pinochle deck in his hand.

The weight killed Mike, who proved the worst disappointment I have seen in an important bout since the collapse of Jim Jeffries in Reno. He didn't sprawl apart the way Jeffries did, but he surely did leave everything he knew in the dressing room when he slammed the door behind him on his way to the ring.

New Motor Cycle Record.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—C. P. Goudy won the 100-mile motorcycle race at the Speedway; time, 3.29.51. T. Carroll was second in 3.35.17, and H. Weishaer third in 3.37.12. Goudy's time establishes a new record for the distance. Twenty-seven riders started, but the pace proved too much for nineteen. Goudy's average time was 53.8 miles an hour.

Grand Circuit at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 13.—The Grand Circuit meet opens here today in connection with the New York State fair. The principal event is the $10,000 Empire State Stake for 2:12 trotters on Wednesday's card. The horse show, in charge of Commissioner Averill Harriman, has attracted 700 entries.

$58,069 AMOUNT OF RECEIPTS FOR BOUT

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The State Boxing Commission today announced that the receipts for the Packey McFarland-Mike Gibbons bout, which was held at Brighton Beach Saturday night, were $58,069. The attendance at the match is given as 28,845. The official statement is as follows:

	$4,437 at $5.00 ..	$22,185
	5,450 at 3.00 ..	16,350
	6,576 at 2.00 ..	9,152
	10,382 at 1.00 ..	10,382
Totals	28,845	$58,069
Passes and press	4,000
	24,845

Share of Boxing Commission
7½ per cent..... $4,355.18
Promoters' share..... $53,713.82

This statement is a solar plexus blow to the reports sent from New York Saturday night to the effect that the receipts for 50,000 persons watched the contest. Many followers of the glove game here are of the opinion that many persons entered the arena without purchasing anything in the Marshall Brothers about it if the figures of the boxing commission are correct.

After paying McFarland $17,500 and awarding Gibbons $15,000, the promoters had $21,113.82 left. It must have cost at least $12,000 to promote the match, while the expenses may have amounted to close to $15,000. Consequently the promoters of the tussle did not make a big cleanup. They were fortunate in "getting from under" without suffering a financial loss.

GIBBONS ON WAY TO ST. PAUL; PACKEY IS STILL IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Mike Gibbons has left for his home in St. Paul. Before going he told friends he had the best of it every round of his contest with McFarland. He admitted he was somewhat slow in the ring and attributed his slowness to the difficulty he had in making the weight—147 pounds.

McFarland is still in New York. He will remain here for a few days as guest of friends. The Chicago fighter said he had the better of every round, although Gibbons was the best man he ever fought against. Only one blow Gibbons delivered, Packey said, caused him any pain. That was a left hand swing to the neck in the seventh round.

"THE RABBITS" COLUMN By Walter J. Maranville HORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

I RECENTLY received a letter from a Dorchester "fan." He wishes to know what I think of Grover Cleveland Alexander and also requests me to state what I believe the Philadelphia pitcher would be able to accomplish if he were fortunate enough to get into a world's series.

THE first part of this question is easy to answer. I have batted against many mighty hurlers since I have played in the National League, and I consider Alexander the best of the lot. He is a pitching marvel and it has been his great right arm that has kept Moran's outfit in the flag fight this year. Without Alexander the Phillies would be quite a distance removed from first place. Several National League players who at one time performed in the American League tell me that Alexander is a letter hurler than Johnson, even when Walter was his best.

IF Alexander is fortunate enough to get into the big series this Fall, he may pitch the Phillies to a world's championship. Moran is not directing the greatest ball club in the world, but a pitcher of Alexander's ability can easily upset the good intentions of the opposition in a short series. Grover would be able to go into the box every other day, if necessary, as he is very powerful and work does not hurt him.

ALEXANDER is usually able to do what he wishes with opposing batters. He has tremendous speed, excellent control and a fine assortment of curves and shoots. A batter who tries to wait out Alexander is foolish, as the big fellow is able to put the ball almost any place he desires. If the batter tries to get a pass to first, he will soon have two strikes called on him. He will then either strike out or be an easy mark for a hit.

Few ball players are able to hit Alexander safely when he gets them in the "hole."

THE Braves have batted Alexander freely this year, but we have one hard and accurate winning from him. He always seemed to get the "breaks" and they play a mighty important part in deciding close diamond tussles. I do not wish to take any credit away from Alexander for he is a remarkable hurler. If he opposes the Red Sox, Giants or White Sox this Fall they will realize that Walter Johnson is not the only pitcher in the world possessing an abundance of class.

I WONDER what will be the next rubbish to overtake our club. We surely have had plenty of trouble this year. Just when things were beginning to look bright, Hagan, Compton, Schmidt and myself met with setbacks. Such things, however, cannot always be avoided. They are a part of baseball itself and must be expected. But to me it seems as though the Braves have had more than their share of reverses.

ROGER BRESNAHAN, manager of the Cubs, is already planning for the 1914 campaign. The Windy City team has proved a failure this year. When the season started most baseball experts believed that the Cubs would put up a hard battle for the championship. They failed to do so, however. On paper Chicago is represented by one of the strongest ball clubs in our league. But for some reason or other the club has been unable to win consistently.

Training Table for Penn Football Men

PORT DEPOSIT, Md., Sept. 13.—The change in weather conditions here precludes the possibility of further easy workouts for the Penn football squad and from now on the hardest kind of daily practice will condition the men for the first game with West Virginia two weeks hence. Training table began today and strict training rules will be preserved from now until Penn plays Cornell on Thanksgiving Day.

Mike Dorisas, famous Greek athlete, arrived today after a trip across the continent. Mike reported to Coach Dickson weighing just 220 pounds. Penn has lost two prospective players in Scott and Lake, who starred at Exeter last season.

'Fans' in Nashville Pull St. Louis Idea

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 13.—Umpires Breitenstein and Pfenninger were the targets of a shower of pop bottles when they rendered decisions that did not suit the fancy of a part of Nashville "fans" in the second game of the Southern Association double-header between Nashville and Chattanooga. As the management

Cavanaugh Big Surprise

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Frank Cavanaugh, the new cycling sensation, again stirred the fans at the Newark Velodrome by defeating Alfred Goullet in their match, but he was caught napping by Cesar Moretti, who took the Brassard away from him.

LEVINSKY MEETS FERGUSON IN ATLAS GO

SANDY FERGUSON, the husky Chelsea heavyweight, will receive another opportunity to come back when he meets Battling Levinsky of Philadelphia, New York, and other parts, in a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night. The whirl will mark Ferguson's second appearance in a Boston ring this year. Sandy clashed with Sam McVey at the Triple A organization several weeks ago. He put up a hard, clean fight, but was stopped in eight rounds. Many ringsiders believed at the time that Ferguson did not show good judgment in clashing with a boxer of McVey's ability in his first contest after a long period of idleness.

LEVINSKY is a rugged fighter, but he is not rated as high as McVey. Therefore Ferguson will have a better chance of winning tomorrow evening than when he exchanged blows with the big Californian negro.

There are few boxers who have won more ring fame than Levinsky. He was performing in the middleweight division when the "white hope" craze was at its height. Jimmy Morgan, Levinsky's manager, then decided to send his protege after the heavyweights. He did this and the battling person experienced wonderful success. His speed and boxing skill enabled him to beat two or three "hopes" a week.

LEVINSKY will weigh about 170 pounds when he clashes with Ferguson, while the Chelsea boxer will scale close to 210 pounds. This will give Sandy a weight advantage of forty pounds. Ferguson was in good condition when he fought McVey, but he will be seen in better shape when he enters the ring at the Atlas Club tomorrow night. Levinsky has been made a favorite in the betting, but Ferguson has many friends who believe he will upset the plans of the speedy Ghetto glove wielder.

THERE is considerable interest being displayed in the semi-final match of eight rounds, which will be between George Alger of Cambridge, and Kenneth Brown, who has been pastiming in Gloucester. These men are old rivals and are expected to put up a spirited mill.

Gilhooley Is on Top.

Gilhooley of Buffalo, who is to join the Nashua team, still heads the International League batmen. His average is .325. Then follow Bath of Toronto, with .324; Channell, Buffalo, .316; Shorten, Providence, .312; Kraft, Rochester, .312; Gleason, Providence, .312; Witter, Harrisburg, .310; Jamieson, Buffalo, .307.

SCHOOL NOTES

WALTHAM got the local school football season under way Saturday. Everett, Somerville, all the Suburban League and Boston High school outfits will get out for the first time today. Concord and Waltham are carded for next Saturday.

* * *

COACH CLEO O'DONNELL of Everett received quite a setback when he got word that Capt. Green, Hanson and Davis would not return. Green was counted on to do the kicking this Fall, while Hanson will be greatly missed as he has been an All-Schoolastic selection the past two years.

* * *

MARSHALL, Joe Brickley, Pontefract, McDonald and Waggatt are the veteran Pittsburg Everett's first opponent, will be met September 28.

* * *

BROOKLINE High is scheduled to play Saturday, and in preparation for the game Coach Delehanty had his proteges do a little training over the weekend.

* * *

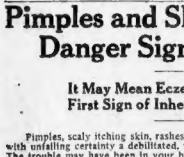
ENGLISH High and Boston Latin suffer from a scarcity of veterans, but have plenty of new material to make up for the loss. Captain Jack O'Dowd and Edward Enright at Boston Latin are about all that Coach Fred J. O'Brien has left with at present as the nucleus for a new team.

* * *

PROSPECTS for a winning team at Somerville are bright. Johnson, an end, Ford, a guard, Travis and Shepard, tackles, Captain Scanlon, Thornton, Grout and Dunn, backs, are veterans. Egan and St. Angelo are promising candidates for end and quarterback, the only weak spots Coach Dave Morey has to fill.

* * *

MALDEN HIGH, with its new coach, Peter Dwyer of Syracuse, has the greatest bunch of material in the Suburban League. Captain Walter Hawes, Boles, Allen, Fowler and Lamprell, each of whom has seen two years in the league contests, have appeared for practice. Assisting Dwyer will be Angell, Tufts' famous forward pass star.



Bryan May Speak at Big Concert at Braves Field

Nearly 5,000 persons attended the first of a series of Sunday afternoon entertainments at Braves Field. The concert started at 3:30 o'clock and continued until 5:30.

When the band played its final number, "The Star Spangled Banner," a mammoth flag, suspended by several kites, was unfurled.

This is the initial number of a series of concerts to be given at the park. The management announced that next Sunday William Jennings Bryan would speak providing he could so arrange his affairs as to come East. Following his address the regular concert will take place.

Toth Wins New Honors in Big Water Struggle

Charles Toth of the L Street Swimmers' Club, who has challenged Henry Sullivan of Lowell for a race to determine the world's long-distance championship, in the holder of a new American endurance record as a result of his swim yesterday, when he went from Charlestown bridge to Boston Light and return in 13 hours and 47 minutes.

Sam Richards made this swim in 13 hours and 9 minutes three years ago last August, but this does not take away any of the honors gained by Toth. Toth was forced to battle against dangerous eddies, whirlpool and cross currents, and only his wonderful strength and endurance enabled him to do it.

The start was made at 1:10 a. m., and the finish at 4:57 p. m. He reached the Light in 5 hours and 35 minutes, and was 11 hours and 14 minutes returning, such were the unfavorable conditions.

He finished in good condition and was able to walk up the gangplank unaided. Outside of the loss of ten pounds Toth suffered no ill effects as a result of his long grind.

Yankees Win at Waterbury.

WATERBURY, Sept. 13.—The New York Americans played the Atlantics an exhibition game, yesterday, to a big crowd, and won, 7 to 3. Fish and Brady took turns twirling for the visitors, while Schneider went the full route for the locals.

Moore-Huey Dates Out.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—George W. Moore, champion, and William H. Huey of Chicago, challenger for the three-cushion carom emblem, will meet for the championship at Music Hall September 28, 29 and 30.

Distruber IV. Sets Record.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—The Disturber IV. established a speed record for motor boats by traveling a half-mile in 28 3-5 seconds, a speed of sixty-two miles a hour.

Why We Quarrelled

No. 2—The Man Whose Wife Can't Keep a Secret Tells His Story

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1915, by Star Company.

MY wife cannot keep a secret. I sometimes wonder if she is utterly incapable of doing so.

I know Ruth would not talk to mere acquaintances about my private affairs. With people whom she does not love she is the soul of discretion.

"I will be discreet," she will assure me when I caution her.

"Secrets make their grave with me," she informed me once.

"You assist at their resurrection, then!" I retorted bitterly.

This was when she had taken her sister into confidence with regard to a scheme I had on foot for leaving the house by which I was employed and accepting a situation offered me by another firm in the same line of business. The position would be ready for me in three months. It would mean a larger salary. Naturally, until the matter was settled and I had sold my present employer of my plans, I wanted nothing said about them.

Yet, as Ruth's interests and mine are one, I did feel that I ought to tell her of the prospective rise in our fortunes. At this time she was worried because we were finding it hard to pay doctors' bills which we had incurred when our baby was born. To do this, yet meet all current expenses, was somewhat of a problem.

"And as baby gets older our expenses will increase," Ruth said, anxiously, one evening. "Is there no sign of your getting a raise in salary"

"No," I told her, "there is not." Then, as I saw her face fall and the distressed look come into her blue eyes, my conscience smote me because of my reticence. Was she not my wife, and had she not a right to know of my prospects?

So, after warning her that what I was about to tell her must be a profound secret, I poured forth to her my hopes. She was delighted.

"Oh," she sighed in happiness. "I am so glad! In three months, you say, you will take the new position?"

"Yes, if all goes well," I replied. "But of course nobody knows of this except ourselves and the head of the firm to which I am going."

"Of course," she echoed, "it would not do for outsiders, would it?"

"No," I said. "For if it got to my present employer he might feel that he did not care to retain longer a man who was going to leave so soon. I will notify him a month before I take my new place."

THE OUTCOME

Is it strange that I was stunned when, a fortnight later, I was informed by the head of the concern for which I was still working that my services would not be required after a certain date—six weeks before I was to go to my new position?

"I understand," explained my employer, "that you have accepted overtures from another concern. So do I know an old man who wants your place and would stay here for some years, I may as well break him in soon."

How could he have learned of my plans? Ruth had said nothing about them, I assured myself. Yet when I reached home that night I asked her about the matter. She was very indignant.

"You might know I would not tell our secret to any outsider!" she said.

"Did you tell it to anybody?" I insisted.

She flushed and stammered. "Why, no—that is, to nobody who would count; only to Mary."

Mary is her sister.

It was my turn to flush now, but with anger. "And Mary," I accused, "is engaged to John Thorpe, who is an intimate friend of the treasurer of our concern. Good heavens, Ruth, can you ever keep a secret?"

Then it was that she declared that secrets made their grave with her, and I taunted her with the fact that she resurrected them.

"But," she argued, her voice quavering—"you told me not to talk to any outsider about this affair. And my own sister is not an outsider, please, remember."

"She is to me!" I returned grimly. "If she had not had a drop of your blood in her veins, she could hardly have done us a meaner turn."

THE ULTIMATUM

"She did not mean to!" she exclaimed. "You know Mary loves me and would do anything for me. I think it's pretty hard if I can't talk to the only sister I have in the world about what interests me so closely."

"My secret is my secret!" I asserted. "And this being the case you have no right to give it to another person."

I was cruel, she said. Did I mean to imply that I would not trust her with another such confidence?

I meant just that, and I informed her of this fact.

I also reminded her of the time when she had told her mother that the physicians had found that my father's illness was of an insidious kind that was sapping his life away, and had ordered that he must not suspect the nature of his disease. Ruth had considered it entirely proper to tell this to her mother.

I also spoke of the time when she had mentioned to her father that my brother Jim was engaged, although Jim had asked Ruth and me to help keep it a secret for a while. Of course Ruth's father said nothing of the matter, being a man. I added now that I wished his daughter were capable of similar discretion, and reminded her that we had quarrelled over all these matters in turn upon many occasions, and all to no purpose.

"And now we are at it again!" I burst forth, "and all because you think that a secret is a thing that one may share with a person one loves, just as one would share a box of candy. A secret is not violated unless one tells it to outsiders—eh? That's it—isn't it?"

But she only repeated that she could keep a secret as well as anybody in the world could, and that I was horribly unjust.

Perhaps I am—but I cannot see it. It is an established custom in China that a new company must pay dividends to its shareholders from the first year of its existence, and this forms invariably a clause of the articles of association. Some concerns which fail to realise a profit have to contract a high interest loan in order to pay dividends in full. It is this practice that compels companies to contract loan after loan until they are plunged into a helpless state. Furthermore, when a new company is established it is from the start tied down to a system of commission paying. In every purchase, as well as in every sale of the company, a commission goes with it, which is therefore counted into every payment and receipt, thus occasioning the need of an unnecessary large amount of capital.

The hare can see objects behind as well as in front. Its eyes are large, prominent, and placed laterally. Its power of seeing things in the rear is very noticeable in coursing, for, though the greyhound is mute while running, the hare is able to judge to a nicety the exact moment at which it will be best for it to double. The giraffe, which is a very timid animal, is approached with the utmost difficulty on account of its eyes being so placed that it can see both ways with equal facility. This faculty enables it to direct with great precision the rapid storms of kicks with which it defends itself.

Among Persian or long-haired cats a white one is often unable to hear the slightest sound. Cats with orange-colored eyes often bear quite well, those having odd eyes—that is, one orange and one blue—hear a little, but not well, and those having blue eyes are sometimes deaf. All kittens have blue eyes till they are six weeks old, when the eyes change to their adult or permanent color. But to show how widely the permanently blue eyes differ to begin with from other eyes, it may be said that immediately the eyes of white cats that are to have permanently blue eyes open they will shine bright red in the dark, and neither the ephemeral kitten-blue nor any other color eye does this. One peculiarity of deaf cats is that they seem to have an aggravated sense of feeling in their foot-pads. It is very difficult for a heavy animal, such as a man, to approach a deaf cat from behind without giving it warning, and this may be attributed to the extreme sensitiveness of the cat's feet recording the slightest tremor of the ground, and so, to a certain extent, taking the place of hearing.

The unassailable supremacy of the "Smiths" in London can be estimated from the telephone directory. The honorable family of Jones, for example, occupies not quite four pages. The Robinsons, who have a place with the greatest, do not require two pages. But the Smiths begin on page 162 and end on page 770.

Gentlemen in tall hats and white cravats were recently seen sweeping a clean pathway from Vintner's Hall to the old church in Upper Thames street, London. The Vintners' Company had elected a new master and it is their ancient custom to sweep him a clean pathway through the dusty city in these quaint costumes.

The record price at auction for a print was made in London, when £6,195 were paid for a "Lady Betty Delme and Children," whole length, by Valentine Green, after Sir Joshua Reynolds, in the first state, with etched letters.

How Much Do You Save?

Hundreds of thousands of married men and women and hundreds of thousands of unmarried fail to save a portion of their incomes.

Hundreds of thousands of others put away a certain sum each week or month.

The Boston American invites its readers to give their experiences in saving for publication on this page.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Saddened by News of the Death of Pussy Purr Mew

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

"I CAN'T get a compartment," said Warren discontentedly, turning away from the ticket bureau and looking askance at Helen and Louise. They had left Bob to finish up at the hotel, pay their bills and so forth, and thinking that there would be little traffic they had neglected to try for a compartment or two earlier.

"What shall I do?" said Warren again.

"Why, do the best you can, dear."

"Yes, any way would be better than staying over when we want to leave," said Louise.

"Well, I'll get two sections; that won't be so bad. Maybe we can change on the train."

They emerged from the railroad station and went back into the hotel. Bob came up to them in the exchange, his face wreathed in smiles.

"Well, everything all right?"

"Not exactly."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"Couldn't get anything but berths."

"Well, it's lucky we got those. Shall we get on down?"

"Sure, unless you want to have dinner here. We have plenty of time."

"Well, come on," said Warren. "Did you see if there was any mail, Bob?"

PUSSY PURR MEW DIES

"No, I didn't. I don't think there is, though."

"I'll see," said Warren, crossing the exchange and coming back with a letter a moment later. "It's for you, Helen."

Helen took the letter and looked curiously at the writing on the envelope. The paper was cheap and the writing was clearly that of an ignorant person.

"Why, I wonder who is writing to me?" said Helen. She tore open the envelope and drew out a single sheet of pad paper. She scanned it quickly and then looked up at the others, her lips drooping like a child's and tears in her eyes.

"It's from Mary," she said, her voice quivering ominously. "Pussy Purr Mew is dead."

"Dead," said the others in one voice.

For answer Helen handed the letter to Warren. It was a simple note written in Mary's unformed letters to the effect that Pussy Purr Mew had died suddenly. She thought it was the heat.

Warren knew that the blow was a severe one, for Helen had been fond of the cat.

"Well, dear," he comforted, "don't feel so bad about it, we'll get another kitten as soon as we get home."

"Yes," said Louise, "and it will be such fun to pick one out. Let me go with you, I'd love to."

"But it will never be the same," said Helen mournfully, wiping away a tear with the corner of her handkerchief.

"I know how you feel, dear, but just think it's only a kitten."

"That's right," said Bob, "there's always something to be thankful for."

"But she does say that Nora's husband will bury it all right," said Helen, taking the letter from Warren's hand.

WARREN PRAISES HER

"And just think," said Bob, "in the excitement we have forgotten about the fact that we are hungry and that we can't get proper accommodations."

When they were finally seated at the table, with a tempting meal ordered, Warren leaned across toward Helen and, to her surprise, caught her fingers under the table.

"I'm proud of you for not making a fuss," he said softly.

Helen reddened at the unexpected praise. When had Warren taken the trouble to praise her for anything before? Not since she could remember. She struggled to fight off the feeling of depression, but it did no good, and the tears would come.

Warren did not say anything more, but she felt intuitively that he disapproved her evident lack of control.

(Another installment of this interesting story will appear soon.)

Observant Youth

"And what," inquired the visitor, who was "being nice" to little Bobbie, "are you going to do when you grow up?"

"Be a business man," responded Robert. "Like father. He took me down to his office last week, and I'm going to work like him, an' have a good time."

"And what are you going to do in business?" pursued the visitor.

"Going to do just like dad," repeated the youngster. "Catch the letter every morning, and, when I get to the office, light a big cigar and sit down at my desk, and say there's so much work to do it's no use beginning till after lunch, and then go back to business and ask everybody else why the work ain't done, and then get so mad because nobody does anything that I'll go home early, and be so tired I can't do a thing except read the paper and smoke more big cigars and rest!"

Respect Older Generation

Its Viewpoint May Seem Narrow, but Its Object is Almost Invariably Praise worthy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"MY folks never want to let me go out and have a good time," writes Jennie. "They seem to think that a girl can go to business all day, then come home and help get supper and go to bed as a machine perfectly contented, without having any fun or going out with any young folks. I can't stand it, so I think I'll leave home."

Of course, if Jennie is a sensible girl she hardly needs me to tell her that she must not leave home—but a little review of the whys and wherefores of the conditions she meets at home may help all the little Jennies to a happier understanding of and with the older generation.

Jennie's parents are, in all probability, hard-working people who either come from a country where freedom is practically unknown or who still hold to the ideas of forebears who came from such an environment.

Suppose Jennie's parents came to America when she was a little girl. In whatever land they dwelt, freedom for girls was an unknown thing.

The twenty-year-old German or French or Italian or Russian girl who chances not to be married is shut in and protected and guarded just as she was when she was fifteen and approaching the marriageable age of her land. Her marriage was an arranged affair in which the parents selected her husband for her. She was supposed to have no experience or knowledge of the world on which to base any judgment of her own in regard to the arrangement of her life.

Under these circumstances it is scarcely amazing that Jennie's parents should fail to assimilate the standards of liberty and independence for young womanhood prevalent in our country.

Suppose Jennie's parents are American born and come from hard-working stock to which pleasure was hardly known, and through whose thrift and frugality Jennie is able to enjoy a good home and some of its comforts. They live in their own youth, and cannot understand the pleasure-loving butterfly living standards of today.

Perhaps Jennie's mother and father are country folk to whom city ways are new; perhaps they are poverty stricken souls who want Jennie to devote herself to work so that she may rise out of the tenement environment where they have to keep her. Any of these suppositions is far more likely to be true than the one that lurks in the back of Jennie's mind.

What does Jennie think? She imagines that she is cursed with tyrannical elders who hate to see her have a good time and who enjoy bossing her around and showing their authority. Or she imagines they are stupid old fogies who can't understand the world of today.

Perhaps they cannot quite understand today's thirst for pleasure and excitement—but they understand all too well today's dangerous longing for pleasure at any cost. They see Jennie's friend Rose sacrificing all her youth and innocent sweetness for a little brief gaiety, and they long to protect Jennie and assure her of lasting happiness instead of momentary joy. Their love makes them inarticulate. They hardly know how to explain themselves to Jennie. They take it for granted that the fifth commandment must mean something to her.

And Jennie, with her superior education and with the better chance than had the older generation, judges them impatiently and thinks they begrudge her youth and joy.

Trust your parents, Jennie. Try to convince yourself that it is just as important for you to understand them as for them to understand you. Have a little faith in the love that brought you into the world and protected your youth.

Respect the experience of your parents rather than the worldly wisdom of tawdry little Rose. Don't toss your head and take the dangerous "youth will have its fling"—I am only going to be young once" attitude toward life.

The older generation has the wisdom of its age and suffering and experience. Convince it that the joys you seek are innocent joys. Make it realise that you do take life with a certain amount of seriousness. And live at home where the conservatism of the older generation may guide you rather than the dangerous flightiness of the untried new generation.

The Love That Is Only Self Love

True Love Seeks to Make Object of Affections Happy

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(Copyright, 1915, by Star Company)

THE idea of love is oddly expressed by many people.

I heard a mother once upon a time say that she loved her children next to her God, yet within twenty-four hours I heard her fret and scold at her daughter over a mere trifle, and argue with her son over a difference in opinion regarding a matter of no importance. When her son tried to change the conversation to more agreeable topics, she still pursued the theme, determined that he should agree with her, and finally succeeded in driving him from the house in a temper.

Then she assumed the expression of a martyr, and complained that her children were undutiful and did not appreciate her.

A man says he loves his wife and cannot live without her. Yet he uses the most abusive language at the slightest provocation, complains of the necessary expense which living in the most careful manner entails, neglects her in every way, and has more than once dealt her blows in the heat of anger.

If this is love it seems to me a platonic friendship would be a restful experience for a change.

A wife insists that she loves her husband, yet she neglects his comfort in a score of ways. He is the wage earner, and provides for a well-ordered home, yet he is constantly irritated by late meals, negligent, careless domestics, and a lack of system in every department of the house.

The wife weeps, blames her servants and thinks her husband unappreciative of her love for him. She declares she would die for him, but she proves herself unable to live for him.

A father says his whole existence is bound up in his children, yet he provides no amusement for them at home, does not permit his daughter to receive the attentions of young men, and expects both sons and daughters to be satisfied in their teens with the sedate existence he himself follows at sixty.

All love of this kind is self-love.

No other word in the language is so terribly misused as the word love. Love worthy of the name can not exist in a heart which does not seek the highest and best good of its object.

No man uses oaths, abuse or blows toward a woman he loves. He does not torment or torture or humiliate her.

No wife neglects the husband she loves, nor does she allow the domestics to fail in their duty and spoil the comfort.

No father or mother who loves a child scolds, nags, or frets at it constantly nor fails to understand its needs or to sympathize with it in joy or sorrow.

The parents who really love their children try to give them a happy home.

The feeling which does not express itself in tenderness and consideration, generosity and patience is not love. It has no right to be called by such a sacred name.

There You Are

Seated at having at last sold a picture to a dealer who was known by the way—Nugent Nochin decided to give an exhibition of his work.

His arranged his creations round the walls of his studio, and, having sent out elaborate invitations, awaited results. On the first day the crowd had consisted of an old lady, who came in to see if he sold birthday cards, and an elderly man, who was wanting something suitable for a pill advertisement.

Next day Nugent left his man-of-all-work in charge, and went out in search of inspiration—and food. The man-of-all-work, who was an aged mariner fallen on evil days had a high opinion of his own capabilities and only awaited a chance of telling them to the world. His chance came when an old lady presented herself and asked to see the pictures.

"Are you the artist?" she asked.

"Well, mum," answered the ancient mariner, "it's all according to wot you means by hartist. That's my 'end you see over there, and I'm in mean—of the other pictures, too. I makes the frames and stretches the canvas; I washes the brushes and I makes the paint. Half a minute, I'll put it on. And there you are!"

MANY ENTRIES OF GIRLS FOR BIG SWIM

FILL THIS OUT.

Please enter me in Girls' Championship Swim.

NAME.....

AGE.....

ADDRESS.....

Hurry up, you girl swimmers.

If you are going into the Boston AMERICAN'S eleventh annual swimming race for girls for the championship of New England and have not sent in your entry, send it in right away.

The race is free and is open to all noon, September 18, at 3:30 o'clock. That is only five days away.

So there is little time left. One can't enter at the last minute. The time limit for receiving entries will be announced soon.

ENTRIES WILL KNOWN.

This promises to be one of the best races ever held in the splendid list of ten annual events of this kind that the AMERICAN has run.

Entries are coming in rapidly. Some well-known girl swimmers are entered. To make it all the more exciting, there are a lot of new ones. There may be "dark horses" among the new ones. One never can tell.

It is a fair field and no favor, with expert officials. The best girl swimmers will win and will receive the five splendid prizes offered as trophies for the event.

The race is free and is open to all New England girls. Entries are in from north and south New England, as well as Boston and central. Portland, Me., will be represented. So will Providence, R. I. Also Ludlow, near Springfield.

Ludlow will send Irene Demers. Irene is a member of the Ludlow Athletic and Recreation Association. Step down from a car in Ludlow. Mention "swimming." Ludlow citizens will quit work to tell you about Irene and how fast she swims.

EASY TO ENTER.

But then—

Who can tell? Boston has some crack swimmers. And there are girls from other cities and towns.

We won't know until it's all over—sometime about a quarter of five next Saturday afternoon.

Meanwhile we can all have a heap of fun guessing and thinking of the fun we will have watching the race when it comes.

There will be thousands and thousands of people to see it. There always are. For this is the blue-ribbon swimming event of New England. Nothing else like it for splendid swimming, tremendous excitement, healthful sport.

It is the easiest thing in the world to enter. All a girl has to do is to fill out an entry blank, as printed in the AMERICAN, with her name, age and address and send or bring it to the Boston AMERICAN Swimming Editor, No. 82 Summer street, Boston.

The race will start from the Metropolitan Park Commission float on the Boston side, opposite the Union Boat Clubhouse. The stake boat will be upstream, and swimmers will pass the boat on their left and return to the start. The course is a mile and a half and 200 feet in length.

OFFICIALS OF RACE.

The officials will be:

Referee—A. J. Lill, president A. A. U.

Starter—H. C. Magrath, Municipal A. A.

Clerk—F. X. McGrath, A. A. U.

Judges—Leo Johnson, Brookline S. C.; D. S. Adler, B. G. A. A.; J. S. McCullough, B. G. A. A.

Timers—H. O. Von Shuckman, B. A. A.; Lawrence Johnson, B. S. C.; Herbert Holm, B. S. C.

Announcer — B. Ostheus, Pilgrim A. A.

There will be a Red Cross tent for the swimmers. Lieutenant Albert Chapman will be in charge of the Metropolitan Police detail, including the police launches for patroling the course. An efficient corps of life-savers, in charge of John J. (Maffit) Flaherty, will be on hand.

McSweeney Calls for More Adequate National Defences

Party politics and the misuse of appropriations for party spoils as the chief factors working against the establishment of an American merchant marine and the development of the ports of this country are dealt with in a paper on the problems of port development by Chairman Edward F. McSweeney of the Port Directors, which is to be presented to the convention of American Port Authorities at Los Angeles, Cal., today.

"The most annoying and persistent handicap to port development is the interjection of partisan politics in port development and administration," Chairman McSweeney says. "The natural desire of the people immediately surrounding a port to see the business of their particular harbor increased has given the unscrupulous politician an opportunity to encourage appropriations and then to seize upon them for exploitation."

Mr. McSweeney urges a more adequate national defence as an incentive to port development and a protection to the foreign trade of this country.

The wild man, who was captured the day before yesterday, was put into a vacant Cave to spend the night. The entrance to the Cave was carefully guarded all night long, four of the crew doing duty in shifts. Yesterday morning, when breakfast time came, Mike Swanson was ordered to pipe the Wild man to mess. Mike piped his lost head off at the entrance to the Cave, but no Wild man showed up. All the crew, including Mike, were rather timid about going into the Cave after him, as the Captain, just to shame them, went in himself. He went in all right, but up till a late hour last night had not come out. See picture in circle to right.

FEAR SANT' ANNA FIRE IS RESULT OF SPIES' WORK

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The fate of the Fabre liner Sant' Anna, reported afire in the Atlantic Ocean on her way from New York to Naples, is still unknown. After devoting several hours today to efforts to get in communication with her commander, Captain Francois Pavy, agents of the Fabre line admitted their failure.

As the hours passed without any further message from Captain Pavy, hope grew at the offices of Elwell & Co., Fabre line agents, that an error might have been made in giving the Sant' Anna as the ship on fire. David H. F. Jones, a member of the firm, said:

"We think that the fire may be on the freighter Joseph W. Fardley, bound from Archangel to Boston. We would have heard direct from the commander of the Sant' Anna if a fire had threatened the ship, because of the number of passengers on board.

"A theory that the fire on the vessel might have been caused by a spy was broached by David H. F. Jones, a member of the firm which acts as the Fabre line agents.

"Among the first cabin passengers on the Sant' Anna are Miss Martha Langley of No. 3 East Fifty-third street, New York; Sister Nasselier, a nun, of New Haven, Ct.; Mrs. A. Leland Gambinossi and Miss Gambinossi of San Francisco; Miss Bertha Crocker and Mrs. F. Laughton of Lake Placid, N. Y.; Miss Ida Putnam and Miss Putnam, aged six, New York; Miss M. Barnicoun, New York; Miss Eleanor Doremus Smith, New York; Mrs. F. Feller, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Neal, Philadelphia; C. A. Stewart, Philadelphia; Rev. Edwin A. Metcraft, Providence, and Mrs. H. G. DeMell and son, New York.

Among the passengers in the second cabin were the following nuns, bound from Montreal to Rome: Sister Marie Nouvia, Sister Marie Gape, Sister Marie Gaguard, Sister Marie Sauveteur, Sister Marie A. Arnicoli, Sister Marie Oyarsenault, Sister Marie J. Ray, Sister Marie B. J. A. Simard, Sister Marie A. C. Arsiou, Sister Marie L. Beauchard, Sister Marie C. Y. Boissert, Sister Marie A. C. S. Despare, Sister Marie E. Thiebault, Sister Marie A. A. Bermer, Sister Marie H. D. Cote, Sister Marie A. F. Dalvig, Sister Marie A. L. Chartien and Sister Marie A. A. Dallaire.

The other passengers in the second cabin of the Sant' Anna are Dominica Paraseno, Erecin, Pa.; Monca Pietro, Viscovi Giovanni, Innato Vitalino, Mangoni Alessandro, Gargano Giovanni, Mangoni Rocco, Pagnotti Giacomo, Cicolo Agostino, Romani Attilio, Gimnasi Antonio, Lemmo Michele, Post Carlo, Nicoi Giulio, Clerico Achichele and Ponetta Francesco, all of New York city; Maria Saccomanno and Teresina Sottese.

Mrs. Allen Wallace of New York, who was listed as first cabin passenger on the books of the line agents here, was not aboard the Sant' Anna. She cancelled her passage just before the liner sailed.

The 1,760 steerage passengers were mostly Italian, reservists who came from many cities of the United States and Canada.

Those from the eastern sections were booked from New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Springfield, Mass.; New Haven and Hartford, Ct., Baltimore, Philadelphia and Montreal. Others came from the western cities of Butte, Seattle, Los Angeles, Cleveland, St. Louis and San Francisco. Some were booked at New Orleans, Galveston and Baltimore.

Though the Fabre line agents had asserted that the cargo of the Sant' Anna was chiefly foodstuffs, the ship's manifest showed that she also carried 3,000 barrels of cottonseed oil, 85 freight cars, 42 casks of copper wire, 400 pieces of black pipe, 13 cases of cyanide of soda, ten cases of potash salts, 18 boxes of machinery, 900 cases of brass rods and 1,000 bags of paraffin.

"The following are the officers of the Sant' Anna: Francois Pavy, captain; Emile Maheu, second officer; Emmanel Canal, first lieutenant; Louis Henry, second lieutenant; Dr. Louis Rasselier, ship's surgeon; Dr. Luigi Parascandalo and Dr. Bartolini, assistant ships surgeons; Roger de Vallois, chief purser; Johan Roussett, assistant purser; Leon Menard, chief engineer; Barthelemy Vaschetto, second engineer; Augusto Amphara, third engineer; Louise Picaa, fourth engineer; Fernand Julian, chief wireless operator; Bonini Grimaldi, assistant wireless operator.

"Several of our vessels have been afire on fire recently by spies," said Mr. Jones. "One had fire was aboard the Lord Erne. As a result we have had our vessels under the closest watch while in port. We examined every piece of freight carefully for signs against bombs or infernal machines that might wreck the Sant' Anna in midocean.

The Sant' Anna was built in 1910 at La Seyne, France, and is equipped with all modern safety devices. Her speed is eighteen knots. She is registered as of 9,330 tons, gross and 5,814 tons net. She is 470 feet long. Her hailing port is Marseilles.

The Sant' Anna was designed for the Boston service at a time when the Fabre line was to have a pier there. The vessel made one or two voyages to Boston, but the establishing of a pier was abandoned and the Fabre line transferred its American sailings to Providence and New York.

The Sant' Anna has been called a hoodoo ship because the many mishaps that have befallen her, although she has managed to survive them all. Wind, wave, fire and the plague have harrassed her on various voyages since she made her first trip across the Atlantic from Marseilles in August, 1910. She was reclaimed the trimmest and most palatial craft that ever formed part of the Mediterranean fleet.

CHINESE SLAYER OF THREE IN COURT

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 13. — Baw Young, alias Ng Hok Leung, the Greenfield Chinaman, who killed Ng Ming his partner Ong Ten, in a knife battle in a Greenfield laundry, later shot to death two cousins, Wu Shee Chang and Ng Hong, in Springfield, was in Springfield Police Court today. His case was continued until Friday for arraignment. Meanwhile he is held without bail.

Following his appearance in the Police Court, Young was taken before United States Commissioner John L. Rice to answer to a charge of violating the Chinese exclusion laws which was pending against him. This case is formally disposed of, and Young was taken back to jail.

Fear of being deported on the charge of violating the immigration laws and the failure of his partner and cousins to finance the legal battle that he was about to start in the courts are believed to be the motives for the triple murder.

Young was overpowered and arrested by Patrolman Michael J. Kennedy after he had killed Ng Hong in a restaurant on Worthington street, following a chase covering some distance.

The first killing of the tragedy was the sound of shots from the restaurant on Hampden street, where Young had entered and shot Wu Shee Chang. Leaving there, he went directly to the other restaurant, shot Hong and started to make his escape.

After eluding his pursuers he was finally arrested on a doorway on Worthington street by the policeman. He levelled his revolver at the officer and snapped the trigger, but it failed to explode.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks ranged a little higher at the opening with about all the trading in New York centered to the usuages. The majority of others were unchanged or a little higher. Crucible Steel opened 3¼ higher at 89. Bethlehem Steel was up 4¾ at 320. Most of the advances were fractional. Trading was fairly active at the start. Bears did not resume the tactics which sent the list off Saturday. The supply of stocks was small and over Sunday orders were sufficient to send the list upward. On the first transaction in General Motors it sold for 261, up 5½. The international difficulty did not prove as adverse an influence in the stock market as some reports as to the situation at Washington led people to expect. The short interest was largely extended last week and had had a bearing upon speculation this morning. It is expected that arrangements for a foreign loan will be made in this country will soon be made. But there is no information at hand as to how far negotiations have proceeded, or just how much the French and British wish to borrow.

MARKET GREW STRONGER.

At the end of fifteen minutes the New York market was stronger than at the start and almost all active stocks were above final prices of Saturday. Among gains were Allis-Chalmers 2¾, American Can ¾, U. S. Steel ⅛, Best Sugar 1¾, Car & Foundry ⅛, Bethlehem Steel 13, Colorado Fuel ⅜, Crucible 3½, General Motors ⅜, Mexican Petroleum 2½, N. Y. Air Brake 3, Studebaker 2, Westinghouse 1¼, Pressed Steel 1, Tennessee Copper ¾, Inspiration ⅛, American Sugar Refining ½, Canadian Pacific ¼ and Baltimore & Ohio ⅜. Trading was off ⅛. There was very little business in rails and coppers. At the end of half an hour Rock Island was up 1⅛ at 23¾.

BOSTON DULL AND STRONG.

The Boston market had a better tone in early trading, but was stagnant. Few issues were traded in during the first half hour. But prices ranged higher. There was very little demand for either rails or coppers. Offerings were equally scant.

Gains here at 10:15 included Butte & Superior ¾, North Butte ¼, Alaska Gold ⅛, Mohawk ¼, Osceola and Atlantic Gulf common ⅛. Granby was off ⅛. At the end of half an hour Wolverine was off ⅛ and Hancock was off ¾.

There was no movement of consequence reported in the metal market this morning.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Germany Has Conceded More to United States Than Great Britain Has

GERMANY'S answer in the Lusitania and Arabic cases concedes two of the three principal points urged by the United States.

First, Germany says that her submarine commanders are not now "allowed to attack (merchant ships) without warning and without saving the lives unless the ships attempt to escape or offer resistance."

That was the principal point in the contention of our government.

Second, to the request for a disavowal of the acts of the submarine commander in the cases of the Lusitania and the Arabic and for an expression of regret, the German government replies officially that it "most deeply regrets that lives were lost through the actions of the commander," and it "particularly expresses this regret to the government of the United States on account of the death of American citizens."

As to the third contention of the United States for "reparation for the destruction of American lives," Germany says that "if it should prove to be the case that it is impossible for the German and American governments to reach a harmonious opinion on this point the German government would submit the difference of opinion, as being a question of international law, to The Hague Tribunal."

This offer must also include the more than a hundred American lives lost on the Lusitania, because Ambassador von Bernstorff in his official note of September 2 to Secretary Lansing said:

> "I beg to inform you that my instructions concerning our answer to your Lusitania note contain the following passage:
>
> "'Liners will not be sunk by our submarines without warning and without safety of the lives of non-combatants, provided that the liners do not try to escape or offer resistance.'
>
> "Although I know that you do not wish to discuss the Lusitania question until the Arabic incident has been definitely and satisfactorily settled, I desire to inform you of the above BECAUSE THIS POLICY OF MY GOVERNMENT WAS DECIDED ON BEFORE THE ARABIC INCIDENT OCCURRED."

In appealing to The Hague Tribunal, Germany stands on American ground rather than on German ground, for this reason:

For sixteen years the United States has been the greatest contender among nations for arbitration of international disputes, and especially of disputes regarding questions of money indemnity.

That principle was strongly advocated by the McKinley administration in its foreign relations, strongly advocated by the Taft administration, and still more strongly by the Wilson administration in the twenty-one arbitration treaties it negotiated and signed.

ARBITRATION WAS ONE OF THE TWO PRINCIPAL CONTENTIONS OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATION TO THE HAGUE CONFERENCE. The deliberations of that conference were secret, but were disclosed ten years later in the published diary of ANDREW D. WHITE, who was president of the American delegation.

The German note Friday makes extremely interesting Ambassador White's authoritative record of The Hague conference, published in his autobiography.

Germany at first opposed arbitration when proposed at The Hague by the United States, chiefly BECAUSE ENGLAND SECONDED THE PROPOSAL. The German delegation, headed by Count Munster, senior Ambassador in the German diplomatic corps, urged that England favored arbitration because she feared, above everything else, a quarrel with the United States. On account of British possessions on this continent, her numerous islands and her overseas trade, preservation of peace with the United States was always her first consideration.

Germany urged that compulsory arbitration would amount to abandonment of sovereignty by the German Emperor. BUT IN ANSWER TO A PERSONAL APPEAL BY AMBASSADOR WHITE, as president of the American delegation, through Von Buelow, the German Chancellor, THE KAISER CHANGED HIS POSITION AND ORDERED THE GERMAN DELEGATION TO SUPPORT THE UNITED STATES IN ADVOCATING THE PRINCIPLE OF ARBITRATION.

Under the agreement, however, both nations reserved the right to refuse to arbitrate any issue.

The second principal contention of the United States at The Hague conference was that ALL PRIVATE PROPERTY SHOULD BE EXEMPT FROM ATTACK AT SEA IN FUTURE WARS.

This contention was vigorously supported by Germany, seconding the United States, and was with equal vigor OPPOSED BY GREAT BRITAIN. The German view was that England wished to rely upon her navy to harass peaceful commerce of any enemy. Germany worked unremittingly with the United States for the freedom of the seas.

Our official notes to Germany in the present crisis have repeatedly alluded to the fact that the United States and Germany contended for the same principle. But very few readers have understood what the allusion meant. The archives of the State Department show that the United States and Germany were united on this question, and were opposed not only by England but also by Russia, France, Norway and Sweden, the latter delegates stating very frankly THAT THEY WERE INSTRUCTED TO FOLLOW ENGLAND'S LEAD.

Upon the subject of prohibiting asphyxiating gases, debated at length at The Hague conference, Germany was willing to agree to forbidding them, BUT ENGLAND OBJECTED, and a majority of the American delegates followed the eminent Admiral Mahan and General Crozier in supporting England. Admiral Mahan urged in an address to the conference that asphyxiating an enemy on land was no worse than asphyxiating him at sea by drowning; that the more deadly wars became, THE MORE UNBEARABLE THEY WERE MADE, THE SHORTER THEY WOULD BE. Ambassador White objected upon grounds of humanity, but he was outvoted by the other American delegates.

Germany has acted in this matter in accord with the views of a majority of the PEACE delegates of Great Britain and the United States at the last Hague conference.

Germany's answer revives the submarine issue, but it appears from the foregoing that Germany and the United States are nearer a settlement of their controversies over international law, respecting violations by Germany, than the United States and Great Britain are over violations of international law by Great Britain.

Germany has granted several of our contentions, and has offered to arbitrate the indemnity to be paid; Great Britain has not conceded the demand of the United States that she lift her illegal blockade of American commerce with neutral countries.

The Ten Commandments of Matrimony

The First Is "Thou Shalt Not Lie"—Many Marriages Are Failures Because Founded on Falsehood

By Dorothy Dix

THE first commandment of matrimony is, Thou Shalt Not Lie.

Neither before marriage nor after marriage shalt thou deceive the partner of thy bosom, but of most importance is strict veracity on the safe side of the altar.

The reason that so many marriages are failures is because they are founded on falsehood, and the men and women who have entered into them are as much the victims of a confidence game as any trusting soul who ever invested his whole fortune in a salted mine, or purchased a gold brick from a sick Indian.

Each has been taken in, flimflammed, done for. The woman the man finds himself married to is no more the woman he thought he was getting for a wife than she is a being from another sphere. The man the woman finds herself united to for life no more resembles the little tin god she thought she was getting for a husband than he does a gentleman from Mars. Even the conditions of matrimony under which they must exist have nothing in common with the way they had figured married life out to be.

What wonder that both are disappointed and disgruntled, and find marriage a failure.

This does not imply that either the husband or wife was a deep, dark, designing villain who deliberately lured the other to his or her ruin. The deception was unconscious and practiced according to the conventional rule that makes it the correct thing to pave the way to the matrimonial Gehenna with white lies. This is always done in our best society, and the custom of baiting the matrimonial hook with falsehoods has been practiced so long that it is doubtful if any catch would ever be made if the truth should be substituted for it.

Common sense dictates that the man and woman who are about to enter into a partnership in which their every interest and every earthly chance of happiness are bound up, should be perfectly frank with each other, and explain the situation honestly, but such candor is never indulged in in matrimony.

No man, for instance, in popping the question to a girl would dare to say "Mary Jane, you have no beauty to boast of, and I am under no illusions that you will set the river on fire with your brilliancy, or are a pin-feathered angel, but you are healthy and wholesome, and practical and domestic, and are the sort of a girl who makes a good wife and a good mother. I like you and I'd like to marry you, but if you marry me you will have to put up with a lot of crankiness and selfishness in me, and for the next few years, while I am getting a good start, you will have to do your own housework, and make your own clothes, and do without the luxuries to which you have been accustomed. How does the proposition look to you?"

Oh, no, no man ever proposes to a girl in that fashion. On the contrary, he tells her that she is the most beautiful creature that ever lived, and that he'll die if she says "no," and that if she marries him, her little white hands shall never have aught to do except to smooth his fevered brow. Then, when she does marry him and finds out that matrimony is a gas range and a sewing machine instead of a silk cushion, there is small wonder that she feels that she has been swindled.

Nor are women any more honest before marriage with men than men are with women. Every girl who is husband-hunting pretends to be what she thinks the man she desires to charm wants her to be. She never has the courage to let even her fiance see her with her complexion off, and her temper and views of life in good working order. Wherefore many a man who thinks he is leading a mild, meek little creature to the altar, that he expects to mould to suit his own tastes, gets the jolt of his life when he finds that he has been united in the holy bonds of wedlock to a virago instead of Patient Grizelda.

Undoubtedly it is more important that a man should be Truthful James, and a woman Veracious Jane before marriage than it is they should be strictly truthful with each other afterward. Indeed, if they have been candid with each each other before marriage they will have no need to lie later on, because they will not be afraid to tell the truth to each other.

The real reason that most husbands and wives lie to each other is because they dare not tell the truth. The man who wants to stay downtown and have dinner with a friend, or play a game of cards, would prefer to tell his wife the truth about it, but experience has taught him that she will lecture him half the night about it if he does, so he tells her a whopper about being kept by business, or having to meet a man from Oshkosh.

A woman would much rather tell her husband that her new hat cost twenty dollars instead of fifteen, except that she knows that in one case she will be berated for her extravagance, and in the other she will get off with merely a conjugal grunt of disapproval. So, human nature being weak, and domestic peace precious, each is forced by the other into becoming members of the Ananias society.

Remember the first commandment, THOU SHALT NOT LIE. Leave the man or woman who is not strong enough to stand the truth to be a fit companion for some other liar.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Strictly Business

Gabriele d'Annunzio, the famous Italian poet, has the most expensive wardrobe in Europe.—News item.

THREE cheers for Gabe d'Annunzio! Although from earliest times
Have poets hocked their clothes or starved while making deathless rhymes.
No bread-and-attic stuff for him; he's never satisfied
Unless he writes immortal works and wears swell duds beside.
When he sits down to turn out pomes or madrigals or chants,
He wears green ties and lilac gloves and striped cheviot pants.

WHEN little Tommy Chatterton put out a perfect lay
He couldn't sell it for enough to keep the wolf away.
But Gabriele d'Annunzio won't poetize at all
Unless each running foot will buy a pea-green parasol.
While every sonnet he turns out is worth twelve pairs of hose,
A velvet coat and seven suits of all-wool Winter clothes.

AS John D. thinks of gasoline, as Morgan thinks of banks,
So Gabriele d'Annunzio regards poetic pranks.
And never fancy of his brain is forth allowed to roam
Unless it's stipulated it will bring the bacon home.
So all ye poets, drink to Gabe! Quaff deep the bubbling cup,
For thanks to him in these glad days the trade is looking up!
